High Finance, Two Kinds
Clara Bow Has Pluck
Russia Worries Them
Harkness, Good American

By Arthur Brisbane

FINANCE in the newly created world of prohibition crime is almost as complicated as high finance in Wall Street.

The police seek John Factor, better known as "Jake the Barber." Factor's lawyers would gladly deliver their client to the United States authorities, that he might be protected from his own friends. They plan to kidnap "The Barber" to make him divide $5,000,000 accumulated in swindling enterprises here and in Europe. Failing such division, they would shoot him.

Mr. "Legs" Diamond, who carries in his body eight or ten slugs recently fired by gangster friends in two attempts to murder him, is particularly anxious to find "Jake the Barber." Mr. Diamond "grub-staked" the "Barber" that he might sell oil stocks to the simple-minded persons in Europe.

"The Barber" made five million dollars and failed to divide with his grub-staker. In the world of gang finance, that means death. No wise insurance company would finance "The Barber" now.

There is no such rough work in Wall Street finance. Yesterday's events there recall your childhood rhyme:

"Jack and Jill went up the hill
To fetch a pail of water
Jack fell down and broke his crown,
And Jill came tumbling after."

Yesterday Big Steel was Jack and American Can was Jill. They both "broke 100." Which means that they fell below par.

In a little while, men will rub their eyes not believing that it really happened. Two years ago, men that "play the market" had for their limit not the sky or the fixed stars, but the distant nebulae. Now they will sacrifice their stocks and later buy them again at top prices. And so it goes.

The late Russell Sage said to this writer in the ancient days: "Young man, everybody has in his lifetime at least one chance to buy Western Union at 50. When your chance comes, don't miss it."

Western Union has been at that least twice since then, and, in all our depression, $106 a share was bid for Western Union yesterday, and nobody sold any.

In October, 1929, it sold at $272.

It was a good day for the newly developed crops of amateur "Bears." What was weakness sold at the lowest price since the summer of 1915. It's the old, sad story. When there are bargains nobody has money, or, if he has, he won't spend it. When there are no bargains, everybody wants to buy. What will happen to those improvised bears, later, will surprise them.

But, mind, we do not, as yet, advise you to buy any particular stock.

It takes pluck to defy blackmailers and extortionists.

One of the criminals, preying upon her, has been convicted of grand theft, another is prosecuted by the federal authorities.

Unfortunately, the long strain in court, with the unsuccessful attempts at blackmail and the efforts to blacken her character, have injured her health, forcing her, temporarily, to enter a sanitarium for recuperation.

The public, with whom Clara Bow greatly increased her popularity, can show its appreciation of her plucky conduct by flocking more than ever to her pictures, constantly improving.

Twelve nations in Europe, to say nothing of this one, are worried about Russian industrial, commercial and business competition. The "export markets of the United States are much affected," you are told. When we used to sell goods, Russia is underselling us. European nations want to form a trade agreement against Russia. And, probably, will succeed no better than they did with their "United States of Europe" that was to tear down barriers among themselves.

The way to compete with Russia is to COMPETE, not merely weep or growl.

If we can't beat Russia at manufacturing and in prices, Russia will beat us in the world's markets. And yelling "Bolshevism" won't prevent it.

There is nothing new about the situation, except that high finance hates to admit that lowly Bolshevism can beat it at its own game.

Before the war Germany was taking business away from England and other countries, as Russia is taking it away now.

Perhaps the nations will put together and decide to fight Russia. If they do, they will lose money.

An expert German said truly and before 1914: "Going into Russia is like sticking your head

MAGRATH IN KAUFMAN PROBE

FINDINGS OF INQUEST ARE SECRET

Autopsy Tonight May Reveal If Rubber Magnate Was Murdered

Medical Examiner George Burgess Magrath of Boston, who has figured in numerous murder investigations, is on his way to the Canadian border to examine the body of Mitchell B. Kaufman, Boston rubber manufacturer, whose body was found after months of searching. Dr. Magrath left here secretly but his errand was disclosed late this afternoon. He will help investigate a foul play theory.

Armstrong, Que., May 19—An inquest to determine whether Mitchell B. Kaufman, long-missing Boston rubber magnate, was place this evening at the cusa victim of foul play, will take toms office here, where the body was placed today.

A brief autopsy was made this afternoon by the medical examiner, Dr. E. D. Humphries, after the corpse was brought out of the woods beyond St. Theophile by a party of officials, guides and relatives.

The medical examiner reserved his opinion of the cause of death for the inquest tonight. If he releases the body it will be taken to Jackman, Me., three miles from here, and transported to Boston.

GUN NOT WITH BODY

Informed that Kaufman's gun was not found near the body, despite the fact that an experienced hunter such as he was would probably have retained his gun until the last, if lost in the woods, Sheriff Elton Markham arrived here from Skowhegan with the admitted pur-

JIMMY M'ALEER WAS SUICIDE

Youngstown, O., May 19—A death certificate signed by Coroner M. E. Hayes said James A. McAleer, former major league baseball manager, whose death was announced April 20, committed suicide.

The certificate gave the cause of death as "gunshot wounds, self-inflicted in the head.

The shooting took place April 28. It was announced then that he died from a lingering illness and following an operation.

Friends said McAleer had been listening to a baseball broadcast. Attacks of illness forced him to leave the broadcast several times. Finally he went into the bathroom of his apartment, stood before the mirror and shot himself. He died 10 hours later.

Friends said today that McAleer had been suffering f m cancer and quoted him as saying:

"If it doesn't get better, I'm going to help it along."

McAleer had been manager of the Cleveland, Washington and St. Louis ball clubs and was the president of the world's champions Boston Red Sox in 1912.

Early Tragedies In Life of Clara Bow

Childhood Griefs and Poverty of Parents Mar Baby Days of "It" Girl

(In yesterday's installment, Louella O. Parsons, who probably knows Clara Bow better than any other person in the world, told how the flaming "It" girl was broken by lovers' deceit—how she was often the victim of her own soft heart—how men, professing to love her, always took from her and how she always refused to dodge trouble by refusing to lie.

Today, Miss Parsons reveals the early life of the famous screen girl, and how grief and poverty robbed her of joy and happiness even in childhood.)

(CHAPTER 2)

Clara Bow's tragedies have not been a matter of recent years. She was born to trouble. Her mother, before Clara saw the light of day, had buried two children born prematurely. Her health had given way under the strain and she feared to have another baby.

"I know this baby will die just like the others, and I could not bear to have another still-born baby put into my arms," she told her husband.

"I know this little one will live," he said, "and be healthy

GENERAL UNDER RUINS OF WALL

Toura, France, May 19 (AP)—Brig.-Gen. Robert H. Dunlap, U. S. M. C., was buried under a collapsing wall of the historic tower of Cinq Mars today, while he was attempting to rescue a woman pinned under the debris. Police said there was a slight chance he would be rescued alive.

The Mayor clung to the hope that the general might have escaped into a cellar adjoining the ruins.

Gen. Dunlap is here as a student at the French War College.

Accompanied by his wife, the general was visiting the tower when he saw bricks falling upon a woman and sprang forward to drag her out of danger. As he reached her side the whole wall collapsed, burying both of them.

Preliminary investigation showed that rains had undermined the tower on the bank of the river Loire, causing the collapse.

WALCOTT NOTES FAVORING ACTRESS SHOWN IN WILL FIGHT

HIS DAUGHTER TELLS HOW SHE WAS EXILED

Says She Was Close to Her Father, but Was Kept Away by Her Sister's Actions

Two memoranda purporting to show that John W. Walcott, late Natick shoe manufacturer, wished his daughter, Mrs. Madeline Walcott Sanborn, Parisian actress, to share equally with his other children in his estate, were introduced today into Mrs. Sanborn's contest of the will.

Mrs. Sanborn, who blames an older sister's "undying hatred" for keeping the actress away from her father's home, charges undue influence on the part of the sister, Mrs. Grace Forbush of Natick, and, in Middlesex superior court, is seeking to break the will.

The actress was left $125,000 in trust, while Mrs. Forbush and a brother, John Bigelow Walcott of Cleveland, were willed $325,000 each in trust, plus half the residue of the estate.

BOTH NOTES IDENTIFIED

Mrs. Sanborn testified today, following introduction of the two memoranda, which were identified as in Walcott's handwriting by John J. Ahearn, a friend since boyhood, and for 31 years tax collector in Natick.

One memorandum read:

"I, John W. Walcott, make this my last will and wish my daughter, Madeline Florence (Mrs. Sanborn) to share equally in trust funds and residue with my two other children. (Signed) J. W. W., July, 1920."

The second read:

"I sent to my daughter Florence money to come home and wish her to share equally with my two other children (Signed) J. W. W., July, 1920."

The memoranda, it was testified by Atty. Lothrop Withington, and Atty. John W. Brennan, administrators of the estate, were found in Walcott's possessions.

ORDERED OUT BY SISTER

On the stand today Mrs. Sanborn, a tall blonde, testified that on each occasion when she went back to her father's home the elder sister, Mrs. Furbush, ordered her out, and on one time ordered a carriage to take her away.

"From the time of my marriage, in December, 1904," she said, "I was practically exiled by my sister from my father's home, although I had been closer to him as a young girl than any in the family.

"On an allowance made me by my father, I kept moving from place to place with my young son, after I had separated from my husband, went to Paris, where I lived for years and went on the stage.

"All during those years I wanted to return to my father's home, but was unable to do so because of my sister's attitude. She never showed a sisterly attitude toward me.

FRIENDLY WITH FATHER

"My relations with my father during my younger life, before I was married, were exceedingly pleasant, because my father liked sports as well as I did and we enjoyed them together. He even taught me to play baseball and ride horses.

"But my sister was constantly telling my father stories about me. When I was only 12 she accused me, before my father, of stealing $46 from her.

"Whenever I came home after my marriage, my sister acted in a very objectionable manner, and told me I could not stay at my father's home because it was not my home to visit in.

"My father was very nervous and became upset over her attitude. As a result he would send me in Boston and other places in preference to his own home."

DOCTORS AGAIN TEST NOBLE

Lawrence, May 19—The two state alienists who have been examining the mentality of Russell Noble, accused slayer of Mrs. Clara E. Ellis, Haverhill widow, will make their final test of the boy at Lawrence jail late today.

Dr. L. Vernon Briggs of Boston and Dr. Clarence A. Bonner, superintendent of Danvers State Hospital, are expected to file their report with the clerk of Essex Superior Court tomorrow.

The popular guess in police and legal circles is that the report would make a finding that Noble is normal.

The report of Drs. Briggs and Bonner is expected to be made public when Noble is arraigned on indictments returned by Essex County grand jury last week.

High Sheriff Frank E. Raymond of Essex County visited the county jail and, in company with Keeper George Bunting, went to the cell occupied by Noble.

Calling the smiling youth to the door of his cell, the sheriff said:

"I hereby present you with a copy of the findings of the grand jury of Essex County in the charges now pending against you."

He pushed the papers through the bars to the Haverhill schoolboy, where could broadened as he looked and said:

"I thank you."

Chamber Holds Annual Election

At its annual election of directors, held today, the Boston Chamber of Commerce chose the following members to fill terms expiring in May, 1934:

For the term ending in May, 1934, the following have been nominated: Willard T. Carleton, Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Co.; Bradley P. Cushing, Hotel Statler; Frederick E. Moore, New England Telephone & Telegraph Co.; Harold P. Mason, Boston Wharf Co.; Walworth Pierce, S. S. Pierce Co.; Joseph P. Manning, Joseph P. Manning Co.; and Leon B. Rogers, Rogers Fibre Co.

Youth Appeals 16 Months' Jail Term

Found guilty of stealing 250 pounds of gum from the Eagle Motor Trade Service, Inc., of Milk st., and three auto charges, John Sullivan, 19, of Dawes st., Dorchester, was given a total of 16 months by Judge Carr in municipal court today. He appealed and was held in $2000.

Police said he shoved Joseph Rothford, company manager, from the running board of an automobile, drove at high speed to Central sq., Lynn, and abandoned the machine.

KIN AIDS FIGHT FOR HATHAWAY

Providence, May 19—A prominent Boston specialist, it was reported today, will be called in by he defense to combat the medical testimony upon which the state relies to convict Elliott Hathaway of Fall River for the murder of Verna Russell, student nurse.

The fight to save Hathaway began in dead earnest today as George Hurley, former assistant attorney-general, took up the reins as new counsel for the accused.

BROTHER IS AIDING

Hurley is rated one of the smartest lawyers in New England. He was a Rhodes scholar and won honors at Oxford.

Dr. Louis Hathaway, brother of Elliott, will go over the state's medical evidence with Hurley late today or tomorrow. Dr. Hathaway has inspected the records and does not consider them as conclusive as Atty.-Gen. Benjamin M. McLyman believes.

LAY DEFENSE PLANS.

"I am confident my brother is innocent if I didn't feel so, I would not be so interested in his behalf," he said. "I shall help him all in my power."

There are 30 or more persons, prospective defense witnesses, whom Hurley must interview in preparation of the case. He is being assisted by John H. Nolan of Newport, son of a veteran of the Newport County bar, and by Samuel L. Jacobs of Boston, Hathaway's original counsel.

'STEEPLER' UP 100-FT. POLE

A boyish prank sent a steeplejack 100 feet in the air today to retrieve a red lantern atop a flagpole at Newton high school. The lantern has rested on top of the pole for two weeks, preventing the raising of the flag at the school.

Thomas "Steeple Tom" Fitzpatrick made the climb today while hundreds of curious gazed skyward.

Police have been asked to locate relatives of Lee Carlton, 55, who died recently in Henderson, Texas.

WEATHER STOPS BIG AIR PARADE

Boston school children are sure of a half holiday Monday to attend the army air maneuvers off South Boston, and may be given the full day as a holiday. The school committee, last night, voted the half day, but Chairman Joseph J. Hurley said he might call a special meeting of the committee to vote the full day.

Fairfield Air Depot, O., May 19—Weather this afternoon delayed the movement of the Army Air Corps' 672 plane formation to Chicago for a demonstration.

The division staff plans to take the formation to the midwest metropolis early tomorrow morning to give the review at the scheduled time of 10 a. m., if possible.

The conditions at Chicago were bad, and worse weather was on the way for the territory between here and the Windy City.

Gen. Foulois said he planned to have the big aerial circus on its way to Chicago shortly after 5 o'clock tomorrow morning, if the weather clears.

All private flying will be halted at many airports and restricted flying maintained at others during the army air maneuvers next week, according to orders issued today by Capt. George A. Parker, registrar of motor vehicles.

Instructions covering the emergency regulations from Sunday to Tuesday were sent chiefs of police, state police barracks, inspectors of motor vehicles and airport managers.

During the maneuvers a patrol of two planes will be used to circumvent the maneuver areas to see that the regulations are enforced.

"Violation of the regulations will cause suspension of the right to operate," the instructions concluded.

From Sunday at 10 a. m., private flying must cease at Boston, Dennison Airport, Atlantic; Muller Field, Revere; Westwood, Metropolitan, Westwood, Agawam, Longmeadow, Westfield and Northampton. At other airports only local flying will be allowed, and that must keep within a three-mile radius of the flying field.

The only exemptions cited in the regulations were the regularly scheduled trips of passenger and mail planes.

Retrial Is Ordered in $1,000,000 Suit

A directed verdict for the defense was reversed in the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today on the $1,000,000 contract suit charging Fred T. Ley & Co. of Springfield with fraud in a transaction at Alexandria, N. Y.

The verdict had been directed by Judge James A. Lowell in District Court after John T. Kesler and his brother, both of Albany, charged they were mulcted out of the Kesler hotel site in that city by the Springfield contractors. Judges Anderson, Bingham and Wilson unanimously ordered the case back to District Court for re-trial, with the opinion that Judge Lowell erred in ordering a verdict for the Ley Co.

MITCHELL HITS U. S. WEAKNESS IN AIR POWER

Former Flying Head Lauds the Men in the Service, but Scores Aircraft

By GEN. WILLIAM MITCHELL, Former Commander Air Forces A. E. F. and Director Military Aeronautics, U. S. Army.

(Copyright, 1931)

Dayton, O., May 19—I have just finished three days' observation and inspection of the army air force which has been gathered together at Dayton.

With the exception of the time when the aircraft sank the battleship of the Virginia Capes, proving for all time definitely and conclusively that aircraft dominate seacraft, this is the most important piece of time military maneuver ever held in the United States. This includes only maneuvers held by armies or navies.

Gen. Mitchell

The aircraft with which the force is equipped are very good for cross-country flying, from a standpoint of maintenance and safety, but as military craft they are deficient to those used by the great countries of Europe.

The men, however, are the finest I have ever seen. They are better than the personnel of any other flying service in the world. We have been extremely careful in the selection of our pilots and in their training.

That we still lag in air power is due to the fact that some parts of it are assigned to the navy, some to the army, some to the Department of Commerce, some to the post-office department, some to the national advisory committee, and several others. No great nation could stand such an inefficient and expensive system. Every other civilized nation has an independent air force. The army is assigned the job of defending the land, the navy the water and the air forces the air.

The army is assigned the job of defending the land, the navy the water and the air forces the air.

Radio Firm Sues for $1,500,000 Loss

Chicago, May 19 (AP)—Suit for $1,500,000 damages was filed in United States district court today on behalf of the Zaney-Gill Corporation of Illinois, manufacturers of radio receiving sets, against the Radio Corporation of America and affiliated concerns on charges of conspiracy to violate the Sherman anti-trust law and conspiracy in restraint of trade.

The bill charged that through cross-licenses and the pooling of more than 4000 patents the defendants had created a monopoly.

THE REST OF THE NEWS

London, Ont., May 19 (AP)—Arthur F. Dow, wanted at Bennington, Vt., on a charge involving a $40,000 stock swindle, waived extradition today.

London, May 19 (AP)—The House of Commons today defeated by 181 to 58 an application for leave to introduce a bill authorizing the operation of lotteries.

Manchester, N. H., May 19 (AP)—While en route to the funeral of a relative, Archie P. Guimont, 54, of Providence, R. I., collapsed in an automobile and died a few hours later.

Bridgeport, Ct., May 19 (AP)—Daniel Nash Morgan, 66, former treasurer of the United States is in a hospital today with a possible fracture of the right thigh, sustained when knocked down by an automobile.

Buenvera Cruz, Mexico, May 19 (INS)—Five persons were shot and killed today near here, authorities said the shooting was done by Agrarians in reprisals.

New York, May 19 (AP)—The government today was in possession of the seven-acre Vanderbilt property, Stapleton, Staten Island, site of a proposed service hospital.

New York, May 19 (AP)—Seven service operatives and city detectives today raided a tenement on East 65th st. and arrested four men on charges of passing counterfeit.

New York, May 19 (AP)—A man, who police say is Telamon Cruger Smith Cuyler of Georgia, today was fighting extradition to New Jersey in a $250,000 swindle.

London, May 19 (INS)—Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, ridiculed rumors that he intends to resign because of ill health. The Daily Herald said today.

KAUFMAN DEATH A MYSTERY

pose of investigating the possibility of foul play.

The body was found in the woods by three guides after a search lasting more than six months.

The party which started from Jackman this morning to get the body, including Albert Wechsler of Boston, brother-in-law of Kaufman, and Jim Murtha, veteran woodsman, had a long trek through the woods after reaching St. Theophile.

They picked up Dr. Humphries at St. Geneon on the way to that point. Eight woodsmen carried the body back to St. Theophile, where a motor hearse, sent from Jackman, was waiting to bring the body here.

The spot where the body was found is only about nine miles in a straight line from where Kaufman was last seen alive.

CANADIANS AID PARTY.

The Canadian doctor has arranged with customs authorities to permit taking the body across the border. If there is no reason to hold the body will be en route to Boston late tonight, it is expected.

A motor hearse is now en route from Boston to take the remains of the long-missing Consolidated Rubber Co. president home for burial.

Murtha said that the body is in a well-preserved condition, due to having been covered with snow until about three weeks ago, and therefore it will be possible to ascertain the cause of death.

The body was found near a small body of water by three licensed guides from Jackman, Me., one of the special crews organized by Murtha in charge of the Kaufman search. They are Ted Wilson, Harry and Lawrence Hughey.

SHARE $1000 BONUS

Although a reward of $10,000 was offered for finding Kaufman, dead or alive, the three woodsmen will not share in it, as they were hired searchers.

They will, however, share a bonus of $1000, it was offered by Wechsler. Murtha said each man would received a third of this bonus.

Kaufman's disappearance set the stage for the greatest hanhunt in history in the North woods, one in which hundreds of woodsmen and lumberjacks from Maine and Quebec participated. Thousands of dollars were spent in the search.

State Police Hunt Fitchburg Bandits

State police were ordered out in force to seek bandits who early today stole 18 guns, a high-powered automobile and a gasoline tank truck in Fitchburg, and later held up a Leominster garageman, taking $30.

The guns, including revolvers and automatic pistol, were taken from the Iver Johnson Cycle & Arms Works. While they were breaking into the Petenaude Auto Sales Co. to steal the car, Patrolman James B Moran, convalescing from illness in his home nearby, went to investigate and being unarmed was driven away at gunpoint. The bandits stole the tank truck from a Fitchburg filling station and committed the Leominster robbery, in which the victim was Walter Maylin, night manager of a Main st. garage.

Scene of Donahue's First Triumph Razed

The building which contained the old Union theater, scene of the late John Donahue's debut as a dancer, is being torn down. Work of razing the building, located at the junction of Union and Main sts., Charlestown, began today.

A four-alarm fire in the building last January and a three-alarm fire there last Sunday made the structure so unsightly that the owners decided to raze it.

WILKINS GIVEN 'BON VOYAGE' LUNCHEON

By DAVID P. SENTNER, International News Correspondent

New York, May 19—Capt. Sir George Hubert Wilkins, commander of the polar submarine Nautilus expedition, today was bid "Godspeed" at a farewell luncheon at the City Club.

Sir Hubert said the submarine would be ready to start out on its trip across the ocean to its jumping-off base at Spitsbergen, Norway, by the end of the week.

Stefansson quoted from an article by Admiral Rodman in which the latter said the Nautilus project was not a scientific expedition and if it did succeed it would be of no value.

CITES RODMAN'S RECORD

The noted explorer named the scientific expeditions in the United States, Norway and Germany which were supporting the expedition "financially, scientifically and morally."

He took exception to Rodman's statement that he knew Arctic conditions.

"I have looked up his record and have not found that he ever crossed the Arctic circle," Stefansson said. "Then he mentions the hazard from the 'polar ice-cap.' There is no polar ice-cap —there is an ice-cap in Greenland, but not at the pole."

PEACE WORKERS LAUD CHAPLIN

Announcement that a letter of praise had been sent Charlie Chaplin for tossing custard pies at nationalism was received with applause today at a peace luncheon at the University Club, where Jane Addams, pioneer social worker, was guest of honor.

From Mrs. Martha H. Elliott, chairman of the luncheon, Miss Addams and 500 others, most of them women, heard about the letter which Chaplin committed his attack on "the sin of over-nationalism."

Those attending the luncheon, which was under the auspices of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, also voted a protest to President Hoover against the army airplane demonstrations and called on him to lead the way in world disarmament.

The hall was filled when Miss Addams, who is most widely known for her work at Hull House, which she founded in Chicago, took her seat at the head table. All stood and applauded.

The luncheon was a high point in observance of Good Will day and was hailed as a disarmament luncheon. Dr. John Howland Lathrop of Brooklyn, executive chairman of the Churches and World Peace movement, and Miss Addams were speakers.

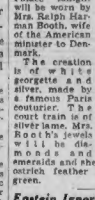
The creation is of white georgette and silver, made by a famous Paris couturier. The court train is of silver lame. Mrs. Booth's jewels will be diamonds and emeralds and she will carry a large ostrich feather fan in pale jade green.

Epstein Ignorant of Royal Academy War

London, May 19—Jacob Epstein, the New York-born sculptor, whose work has caused great controversy here, is not interested in the co-called "war" over his election to the Royal Academy.



Jacob Epstein

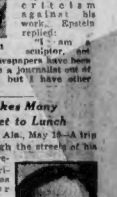
He told International News Service he did not know anything about the affair.

Asked what he thought of the Royal Academy and the criticism against his work, Epstein replied:

"I am sculptor, not a publicist. Newspapers have been trying to make a journalist out of me for years, but I have other things to do."

Senator Shakes Many Hands to Get to Lunch

Birmingham, Ala., May 19—A trip to lunch through the streets of his native city resembles a triumphal progress for Senator Hugo Black.



Senator Black

His secretary, wondering at the length of the Senator's lunch hour, made some investigations. It was discovered that, in the short walk to his favorite restaurant, the greetings and handshakes of his constituents brought him to a halt every five feet.

The three-block trip required an hour.

Funeral Held for George R. Presby

Funeral services for George R. Presby, Boston broker, were held today at the First Universalist Church in Malden. Mr. Presby, who was 59, died Sunday at his home in Station rd., Lincoln, where he had lived since leaving Malden four years ago.

He was born in Malden and lived for many years in Maple st. Mr. Presby was at one time vice-president of the Kernwood Club, and was a member of the Boston Athletic Association. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Esther L. Presby.

Ten American Debs to Meet British Royalty at Court Tonight

Children and elders from all walks of life joined today at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross in paying tribute to William Cardinal O'Connell on the 30th anniversary of his elevation as bishop. Suicide Taken by Friends to Mean He Could See No Way to Escape

Robert Shaw Montgomery, Boston social registerite and clubman, who took his own life in Washington after killing a policeman and shooting down a night club manager, was planning to train for the ministry next fall, the Boston Evening American learned today.

His ministerial leanings, it is believed, resulted from his seeking relief from the sense of fatalism that always was strong within him.

A fatalist, "Bob" Montgomery at last was overtaken by Fate and entered within the circle of suicide and tragedy on whose rim he had lived.

While in Boston he dwelt in the apartment where one of Boston's most famous girl suicides died, and he had been a friend of two suicides, one of whom took his life in grief for the other.

IN TRAGIC ATMOSPHERE

"Just recently he told me he was planning to enter the ministry," said his close friend, Lieut. Chester C. Wood, U. S. N., now at the radio school at Harvard, today.

"A little while ago a mutual friend told me, 'Bob' was actually planning on entering in September. I am not sure. He told me that when he passed his certified public accountant examinations, he would study law."

Since his arrival in Boston in 1929, after he had left Princeton, which he attended for three years, Montgomery had dwelt in an aura of tragedy.

He had a number of addresses here, Fayette st., Joy st., the University Club, and 282 Newbury st.—and at 282 Newbury st. he lived in the apartment where Pauline C. Clark was a dramatic suicide in 1922.

BELIEVED DESTINY FIXED

What effect those walls of tragedy had on Montgomery only he could have told, but while in Boston one of his favorite topics was fatalism.

"We are all traveling a road with a definite end," he declared on many occasions, "and where that end is has been fixed for each of us."

Montgomery knew the apartment he occupied in Newbury st. was that of tragedy-ridden Pauline Clark, because he had mentioned that fact to friends.

He knew the manner of her death, by poison at the end of a gay party, and knew the after-

CARDINAL RAISES SACRED HOST IN DIVINE THANKS

Completing 30 years as a bishop in the Roman Catholic Church, William Cardinal O'Connell pontificated at a solemn mass of thanks in honor of the occasion. Devout from all sections of the city attended the mass to receive holy communion from the prince of the church on his anniversary. The Cardinal, with blessed sacrament in his hands, is shown as he stepped from the altar to the altar rail to dispense communion to the greater part of those attending the mass. (Staff photo.)

MILLIONS ARE EXPENDED ON CEREMONY

More U. S. Women to Be Honored at Presentation Tomorrow Night

London, May 19—King George and Queen Mary, assisted by the Prince of Wales, will receive in historic Buckingham palace tonight, among others, 10 American debutantes and the wife of an American minister in the first of the social season's four court presentations.

The last curtsey was practised today and the last ruffle patted into place in preparation for the crowning event in the social lives of the elect. They will wear gossamer gowns of tulle, chiffon and lace, the majority of them white, but some in pale shades of color. Pearls will be the most favored adornment and feather fans will be preferred to bouquets.

WILL MEET QUEEN.

Mrs. Charles Gates Dawes, wife of the American ambassador to the Court of St. James's, will present the following:

Mrs. Ralph Booth, of Detroit, wife of the American minister to Denmark; Miss Barbara Hutton, Miss Louise Benn and Miss Virginia Penn, of New York; Miss Helen Brinton, Miss Margaret Duane and Miss Edith Martin, of Philadelphia; Miss Adele Jahncke, of New Orleans, La.; Miss Bertha Potter Palmer and Miss Virginia Dawes, of Chicago; and Miss Jasmin Schoellkopf, of Buffalo.

Nine American women, six debutantes and three matrons, will participate in the second presentation tomorrow night.

The coming four royal courts will put $3,000,000 in the pockets of English tradespeople.

Apart from the British girls to be presented, the great majority of the foreign debs have their court dresses made at the regular London modistes, while in addition most of the incidentals are purchased in the capital.

WHERE MONEY GOES.

The three millions will be expended mainly as follows:

Dresses	$1,400,000
Uniforms	500,000
Shoes	175,000
Fans	120,000
Hairdressing	25,000
Photographers	50,000
Hire of automobiles	35,000
Hotel bills	550,000
Perfumery and cosmetics	25,000
Flowers	50,000
Tips	30,000

Those debutantes wishing to save money have their court dresses altered for their coming-out balls, while a great many keep them to wear at their weddings.

Banks Investing

Washington, May 19—Banks with an abundance of cash on hand were said today by the Federal Reserve Board to be increasing their investments in government securities.

MAN FREED FROM JAIL BY WIFE

Through the persistent efforts of his wife, who steadfastly believed in his innocence and carried on an investigation which proved it, Arthur O. Yloman, 28, of Washington st., Lynn, was freed from Salem jail today when the grand jury returned a "no bill" in his favor on a breaking and entering charge.

When Yloman was arrested by Patrolman John Casey on April 12 for breaking and entering a chain store on Lawton ave., Lynn, he protested his innocence.

When he was held for the grand jury he had practically lost hope, but his wife, Dorothy Yloman, began an investigation and obtained the services of S. Howard Donnell, well-known Lynn attorney, who conclusively showed his client had nothing to do with the robbery.

WOMAN WANTS MIXED JURY

A novel point was argued before the full bench of Supreme court today when counsel for Mrs. Genevieve Welosky of Chelsea sought to uphold her exceptions in a liquor case on the ground that women were excluded from the jury before which she was tried.

In Superior court, Mrs. Welosky was found guilty of keeping and exposing intoxicating liquor for sale, and was fined $50.

Evidence at the trial was that police raided her home last July and found distilling apparatus for making alcohol, and that men were seen going into the house sober and coming out drunk.

Edward M. Shanley and George E. Roewer, counsel for Mrs. Welosky, argued that she had claimed the liquor to be for her husband, and that such manufacture was not evidence that liquor was kept for sale.

They argued also that the jury should have been drawn from the whole body of qualified voters, composed of both men and women.

Error in Will Nets State $570,000 Tax

Hartford, Ct., May 19 (AP)—The State of Connecticut will collect an inheritance taxes of approximately $570,000 from the estate of Samuel Brinkerhoff Thorne, late of Greenwich, simply because Mr. Thorne neglected to specifically state in his will that funds intended for charity, and which will be paid to charity, were intended for such purpose.

Traffic Officer Is Injured by Crash

Traffic Officer John Cronin, of the Chelsea police, received injuries last night when the traffic box in which he was standing at Broadway and Williams st., was struck by two trucks which figured in a collision. The officer was removed to his home with injuries to his legs.

CITY MAY HELP BLINDED MAN

The city legal department today promised a hearing to David Prendergast, 55, of Morton st., Dorchester, on his claim that he was blinded during an X-ray examination at City Hospital last winter.

According to Prendergast, whose blindness has rendered him and his two aged sisters destitute, he was told by an attendant to sit up during the examination, and struck his head against the X-ray apparatus.

He carried the claim for damages to the corporation counsel's office and, he says, was denied a hearing.

City Councillor Israel Ruby, of Dorchester, became interested in Prendergast's case, with the result that Assistant Corporation Counsel Mary Costello today notified the eighties man to appear at the legal offices for a hearing on Friday, May 22.

HIGH RATE EVEN FOR PLUMBER

The uplift movement in plumbing gained great headway today, when Abraham Fisher of Leverett st., West End, a plumber, but a plumber without portfolio, bent an elbow joint in municipal court and donated $250 to the county for alleged naughtiness in industry.

To the layman, who takes his plumbing where he finds it, it came as considerable of a surprise that there are plumbers and plumbers.

As explained technically to the court by Inspector John P. Drury of the building department, Fisher has an insatiable desire to plumb, also an insatiable desire not to be registered as a plumber.

After five years of warning Fisher, the inspector said, he got tired and took Fisher into court.

For advertising himself as a plumber, Fisher was fined $200; for engaging in the plumbing business without being registered he was fined $25, and for doing a plumbing business without being registered he was billed a like amount.

AUTO HIT TREE, GIRL IS DEAD

Westfield, May 19 (AP)—Miss Ruthlyn Smith of West Springfield died today of injuries suffered Saturday when an automobile in which she was a passenger got out of control and struck a tree. Her chest was crushed.

There were four women in the car, which was driven by Miss Eloise Smith, and all were taken to the hospital.

The injuries of the others were less serious than those of Ruthly Smith.

'RED FLAME' IS IN COURT AGAIN

Lawrence, May 19—Edith Berkman, "Red Flame" of the Lawrence strike; William T. Murdock of Chicago and John C. Czarnecki and Alex Danelevich, both of Lawrence, were arraigned before superior court today, charged with conspiracy in connection with the strike of last March.

All four labor organizers pleaded not guilty to indictment charges of conspiracy to intimidate employes, conspiracy to destroy buildings, conspiracy to injure property and conspiracy to injure business of the American Woolen Co.

Big Shipper Here

BIG SHIP LINE OPENS OFFICES

Herr Philip Heineken, president of the North German Lloyd Line, opened the new Boston office of the company at 232 Boylston st. with appropriate ceremony today.

This is believed to be a step toward realization of Mayor Curley's vision of establishment of regular, four-day service between this port and Europe by ships of the line.

President Heineken said this plan is under consideration, but has been deferred because of economic conditions.

He will attend a tea late this afternoon given in his honor by Consul-General von Tippelskirch, and this evening will be guest of honor at a dinner at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, at which the host will be Christopher de Groot, Boston manager of the line. He leaves for New York Thursday to sail for Germany.

TAX SALE HELD IN BROOKLINE

The town of Brookline went into the real estate business today, starting in a modest way with 41 parcels of property.

It didn't do so badly on the first day, as 20 of the parcels, put up for non-payment of taxes, were "sold" to persons who did have the tax amounts handy, and tax deeds were turned over to the "buyers."

Then the real estate business was adjourned until 10 a. m. tomorrow.

The real owners of the property sold over their heads still have time to redeem the parcels, however, and may pay back the tax deed holders, plus 6 per cent.

Defies Sir Charles to Give Half His Riches to Poor

London, May 19 (INS)—The poor of Newcastle today are awaiting the reply of Sir Charles Trevelyan, former minister of education, to a challenge from a Conservative member of Parliament that they each give half of their fortune to the poor of the city.

The Conservative member, whose name was not mentioned, gave Trevelyan a week to answer.

Trevelyan has been a consistent preacher of the need for better distribution of wealth.

TROOPS SAVE 2 FROM LYNCHING

Atlanta, Ga., May 19 (AP)—Two Negroes, charged with attacking a white girl, were spirited away from a mob at Elberton today disguised in army uniforms and lodged on Fulton tower here by national guardsmen.

The Negroes were hidden in trees surrounding the Elberton jail for an hour and a half, militiamen said, before they were put in an automobile and hurried to Atlanta.

Shortly after, the 200 guardsmen who had stood off a mob variously estimated at from 2500 to 5000, mounted their trucks and buses and departed.

At Fulton Tower the two negroes were booked as Hizak McCorley, 17, and John Dowey, 25.

Two white men, E. A. Edwards, 18, and Glenn Crowder, 25, are in Elbert County Hospital suffering from gunshot wounds as the result of attacks upon the jail.

Machine gun fire tear grenades, smoke bombs and fire hose were used by officers and guardsmen in repulsing repeated attacks, two of which penetrated to the cell doors of the two negroes.

The negroes were removed from the jail, militiamen said, after the mob threatened to blow up the building with dynamite.

BEAUTIES SAFE IN FIRE

MARTIAL LAW DECLARED AT END IN SPAIN

Madrid, May 19 (AP)—Spain's capital revelled in freedom from martial law today for the first time since the beginning of the incendiaries' riots against Catholic property and the provinces looked forward to the same privileges by the end of the week.

After a lengthy meeting of the cabinet, civil rule was restored last night.

Dispatches from centers of recent outbreaks showed that the trials of those responsible for the disorders and incendiarism were being pushed, looted church property was being restored and priests, nuns and monks gradually were returning to their convents.

President Alcala and Papal Nuncio Federico Tedeschini held a second conference yesterday over what was believed to be Pope Pius' protest against anti-religious depredations, but no announcement was forthcoming. The Vatican attitude toward the departure of Cardinal Primate Pedro Segura and the expulsion of the Bishop of Victoria still is a secret as well.

Father Juan Flores Gutierrez has been arrested in Manzanares on a charge of stating in a sermon that the republican government was responsible for the anti-clerical violence.

WINGS SET TO THE BREEZE

"Set every threadbare sail," wrote Oliver Wendell Holmes in his famous poem, "Old Ironsides." Today sails were set for the first time in years on the famous old frigate, now being reconstructed at the Charlestown Navy Yard. The foretopsail was the first of the new canvas set for the breeze.

'OLD IRONSIDES' DRESSED UP

The reconstructed frigate Constitution, "Old Ironsides," started to "dress up" today at the navy yard, Charlestown, when four of her square-rigger sails unfurled. Her foretopsail was first to flutter as sailors sent it aloft for the final touch that will recall Revolutionary days when the vessel achieved her fame.

Her flying jib, the jib and spritsail followed as Capt. Louis Gulliver, her commander, and Lieut. John Lord, in charge of the reconstruction, saw their work nearly complete.

NINE SAVED AT SOUTH END FIRE

Nine persons, four of them children, were rescued by police, one police officer was overcome by smoke and about 20 persons fled to the street as fire swept the upper stories of the five-story brick building at 1583 Washington st., South End, early today.

The blaze was seen by Joseph Rogerio, a taxicab driver, who sounded the alarm. Patrolman John Sheehan rushed in to arouse the occupants of the building and was overcome by smoke.

Other officers rushed into the house next door and aroused occupants. Patrolman Joseph Linehan, of the East Dedham st. station, assisted Charles Austin, 60, and Francis Smith, 63, from the fourth floor of 1583.

Wedad Saif, 14, and her sister Nebiha, 11, had a bad few seconds during the blaze when they wept on the street, believing their pet kitten, Beauty, to have fallen a victim of the fire.

When they returned to the second-floor tenement, however, there was Beauty curled up in a corner and fast asleep.

Albert Reis, 33, was asleep on the third floor when burning brands, dropping from the ceiling, set fire to his bed and awakened him. With a blanket draped over his head, Reis made his way to the street.

In No. 1581 police assisted Mr. and Mrs. William Walsh and their four children, Mr. and Mrs. Frank O'Brien, and Mrs. Mary Doran and her son and daughter to safety.

The damage is estimated at $10,000.

Roxbury Man Held

George Swain, alias Monte LaVerne of Warren st., Roxbury, was arrested in Marblehead yesterday for securing money under false pretenses on complaint of Mrs. Helen Boys of Oak st., Marblehead.

TOSCANINI HELD UNDER GUARD

London, May 19 (INS)—Arturo Toscanini, conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, whose refusal to play the Fascist national anthem at a concert in Bologna several days ago incited a personal attack by the audience, is being held a virtual prisoner in his own house in Milan, the London Daily Telegraph said today.

Milan, Italy, May 19 (AP)—Twenty persons were arrested last night at a concert at the Scala Opera House for demonstrating in favor of Arturo Toscanini.

'AFRICAN PEER' BURIED ALIVE

Orange, N. J., May 19 (INS)—Orange police today were holding the Rev. Madison Ruse, 41, Negro pastor of the Friendly Rescue Mission.

Told that a man was being buried alive in the Mission churchyard police despatched a few detectives who found a man had been buried alive. So they asked the Rev. Mr. Ruse, who had just patted down the last spadeful, who was buried alive.

"The peer of African mystery," said the pastor.

So police began to dig. Four feet down they reached the "peer of African mystery" in a crude box. he was still living. When the Rev. He was still breathing. An inhale the peer opened his eyes.

The peer, who identified himself both as "Sankah Bey & Co" and Joseph Ross, said he was just practicing. He had persuaded his friend, the pastor, to bury him alive, a stunt he hoped to use in a carnival this summer.

THE REAL CLARA BOW — By Louella Parsons

Poverty Added to Grief in "It" Girl's Childhood

and a comfort to both of us."

"Her brother, Harry, introduced us," Mr. Bow told me, "and I knew the moment I met her that I wanted to marry her. She was always delicate and subjected to severe fainting spells, but I told her mother and father I would take such good care of her that she would grow strong and well."

But each year she grew worse until there were times when he feared she would die before he could get a doctor.

To this sick mother and this hard working father Clara Bow was born in a tiny house in Brooklyn. Her birth was not an easy one, but she came into the world a perfect baby. The mother, who almost gave up her life, immediately showered an almost fanatical devotion on the little mite. The father, Robert Bow, who had secretly feared that this baby, too, would be born dead like the others, felt that his cup of happiness was full.

Early Sorrow
Childhood Marred by Grief

He hadn't much money and jobs were scarce, but he made up his mind to do everything he could to make his young wife and his little daughter happy.

He eked out a meager living, often denying himself food so that the mother and babe could live. No work was too menial for him so that he could bring in a few necessary dollars.

"I'm not ashamed," he told me, "to say that I even took a street-cleaning job once when there was nothing better available. I did everything I could and I would have even scrubbed floors so that Sarah and little Clara would not go hungry."

The tiny baby girl grew into a rosy-cheeked child. She had great dark eyes, and from the time she learned to lisp she would repeat verses that she heard and mimic everyone who came to the house. There were many days when her mother had to stay in bed and, young as little Clara was, she knew that she must not talk loudly or make any noise.

As Mrs. Bow grew steadily worse, jobs for her husband became increasingly difficult. He would be summoned home and fearing that his little girl to whom he was father and mother would be alone with her sick mother, he would leave his work and hurry to Mrs. Bow's bedside.

Even those early childhood days of Clara's were filled with sadness and tragedy. She adored her pretty mother, whose blonde hair and big blue eyes had first attracted Robert Bow. But Clara's mother was too ill most of the time to even hold the little girl on her lap or do any of the hundred and one things that mothers delight in doing for their children.

First Tragedy
Death of Grandfather

Later, Clara was to realize that her mother had an aversion to anything that concerned the stage or screen. She was to find that even the mention of an actress would make her mother very unhappy. No wonder, after the harassing experience of her childhood and girlhood Clara crutched frantically at a few straws of happiness once she was out of that depressing environment.

Her first real tragedy came when she was five years old. Her grandpa, Gordon, lived with the Bows. He was a gentle, kindly old man who would amuse Clara by the hour, swinging her in a home-made swing and telling her stories. The old man, alone, could bring a smile to Mrs. Bow's face. One day while he was swinging the little girl, he fell to the floor unconscious. The doctors said that it was a paralytic stroke due to old age. He only lived a few days.

Clara, lonesome for her playmate, begged for her grandpa to swing her again. Finally, Robert Bow took her by the hand and led her to the front room where the old man lay still and quiet in his last sleep.

That night Clara crept out of her own little bed and laid down next to the coffin and fell asleep.

"I am afraid Grandpa will be lonesome," she told her father.

Even then at the age of five, Clara Bow could not bear to think that anyone else was suffering. Those same loving, impulsive, sympathetic thoughts for other people, which are so characteristic of her, had their root in the tiny child who couldn't bear to have grandpa lonesome.

The old man's death affected Clara's mother greatly. Each day she grew more melancholy until for days at a time she would hardly speak to either Clara or her husband.

One time when Clara and I were talking together she told me she felt an unlucky star was in the ascendant when she was born.

Fate Against Her
Clara Tells of Shocks

"No matter what I do, Fate seems against me. Why, even when I was a little girl a four-year-old boy who lived next door to me was burned to death. I rushed in when his mother screamed, grabbed a rug to throw around him and he died in my arms, calling: 'Cara, Cara, it hurts!'

"I don't believe it hurt him as much as it hurt me. My mother was so sick, and playing with this little boy was about the only pleasure I had in the world. I have only cried as hard once since the day Johnnie was burned to death and that was when my mother died."

Clara grew into girlhood in these unhappy surroundings in Brooklyn. Her father, doing his best for her, her mother growing worse each year until her fainting spells occurred as often as twice a week.

Brooklyn neighbors who knew Clara when she was a little girl, tell of her playing baseball with the boys—a wholesome, rosy-cheeked child who loved to romp and play, but in whose deep, dark eyes there was always the shadow of tragedy.

Clara never owned a doll, but she was a champion runner and on the days when her mother wasn't sick in bed, Clara used to challenge the Brooklyn kids to a game of run-sheep-run, or hide-and-seek. Many of them now boast that they know Clara when she was knee-high to a grasshopper.

....CLARA BOW · 4 YEARS OLD....

...WHEN CLARA WAS 14....

The early days of Clara Bow were filled with sadness and tragedy. Her mother was ill. So sick that she could give Clara little of the attention given most children. In Brooklyn, Clara romped with the boys of the neighborhood. She was fleet footed. She played baseball. She disliked dolls. (International Newsreel photo.)

Like Her Father
Generous, and Unwise

I once asked Clara where she was educated.

"I went to public school," she told me. "The stories that have been printed about me being educated in a select girls' school are absurd. We never had enough money to spend to send me to a stylish finishing school. My father did the best he could. When he married my mother, my uncle, Harry Gordon, said he was afraid that mother would have to go to work one day. My father had an interest in a small restaurant and he used to wait on tables."

"Waiters," said my uncle, "never amount to anything."

"It was my father's proud boast that mother never had to work and that, while he could not give us luxuries, at least we always had all the money he earned. It might not have been a banquet of caviar and squab, but we seldom went hungry, although often there wasn't much money in the family pocketbook.

"My father was of French and English parentage, and my mother of Scotch and English. I guess I am more like my father," she told me, "for certainly I have never been as thrifty as the Scotch people are reputed to be."

Certainly Clara resembles her father. He has twinkling, dark eyes and a smile. He loves a joke and he has Clara's gullibility. His two unfortunate marriages after Mrs. Bow's death show how easily he believes in people. He, too, is generous and wants to share whatever he has with his friends. Certainly an admirable trait, if not a particularly wise one.

GREEN HITS PAY CUTTING 'PLOT' BY BANKERS

Houston, Tex., May 19—Big bankers are in a conspiracy to force wage reductions and in some instances are refusing credit to manufacturers who refuse to cut wages, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor so charged here in an address before the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen's convention. He called upon the workers of the nation to resist wage cuts "with all the power they possess."

Green declared:

"Many representatives of labor believe that a group of powerful banking and financial interests are attempting to enforce a general reduction in wages.

"They interpret the statements recently made by Mr. Wiggin, of the Chase National Bank, Mr. Roberts, of the National City Bank of New York, Mr. Stephenson, representing the Bankers Association, and Melvin A. Traylor, of the First National Bank of Chicago, in favor of wage reductions, as evidence of this fact.

"Labor regards the wage reduction arguments offered to the public by the representatives of these financial institutions as more than a coincidence. Some refer to them as evidence of a conspiracy.

"Reports have reached headquarters of the American Federation of Labor that some bankers have refused to extend credit to manufacturers unless they reduced wages. This is coercion of a most reprehensible character."

Even in Death's Grip Gen. Eltinge Obeys Superior's Orders

Omaha, Neb., May 19 (AP)—In delirium as he lay on his deathbed at a hospital here last week, Brig.-Gen. Leroy Eltinge refused to take medicine ordered by his doctor.

His nurse told how the general was "commanded" to take it.

"I am Gen. Pershing. I command you to take your medicine."

Gen. Eltinge, she said, raised his hand feebly in salute as a look of comprehension came over his face—and took the medicine.

Gen. Eltinge was buried in Arlington (VL) cemetery with full military honors.

54 ARE SET FREE IN RENO COURT

Reno, Nev., May 19 (AP)—Fifty-four persons were free of marital ties today as a result of eight hours of legal action in the district courts.

Thirty-two new suits also were filed under provisions of the six weeks' residence divorce law.

It was the third successive "divorce Monday" on which Judges Thomas F. Moran and Benjamin F. Curler had all they could do to clear their calendars. Courts convened at 9 a. m. and the two judges did not leave their benches until 5 p. m.

Among the divorcees granted was that of Katherine B. Mygatt from Gerald Mygatt, short story and scenario writer.

China Approves of Silver Parley

Nanking, China, May 19 (AP)—The Nationalist government has endorsed in general principles the proposed international conference to stabilize silver it was learned well informed circles today, and will support any international movement to deal with the present situation. The government has not yet decided to initiate the conference, although the matter is being studied.

Paris, May 19 (NS)—Mrs. Claude Fonse, the former Juanita Waterman, who was married in Los Angeles, Cal., September 14, 1913, was granted a divorce here today on grounds of desertion.

CLEANERS OPEN WAR ON CAPONE RACKETEERS

Chicago, May 19 (INS)—Aided by city officials and law enforcement agencies, organized cleaners and dyers of Chicago today were engaged in a campaign of resistance against reported efforts of "Scarface Al" Capone to seize control of the industry.

Mayor Cermak, who promised during his campaign to drive racketeers from the city, was one of numerous public officials who avowed their admiration and approval of the cleaners and dyers for refusing to deal with Capone.

State's Atty. Swanson declared he was ready to go before the grand jury and request indictment of Capone for attempted extortion.

Capone's attempt to gain control of the cleaning and dyeing "racket" was revealed by Dr. Benjamin M. Squires, arbiter of the Cleaners' and Dyers' Institute. He made public the fact that a conference had taken place between Capone and a delegation from the institute, during which the gang leader said if his proposal were rejected he would employ force to gain his ends.

WORLD BANK TO PAY 6 PER CENT

Basel, Switzerland, May 19 (AP)—It took only 35 minutes today for the central bankers and other delegates from 24 nations to settle their business at a meeting of stockholders in the Bank for International Settlements.

A dividend of 6 per cent was voted.

President Gates W. McGarrah's report summed up the activities of the fiscal year, tracing the bank's growth from seven shareholders to 23, and from deposits totaling 220,000,000 Swiss francs, with assets and liabilities of 300,000,000, to deposits of 1,780,000,000 and total assets and liabilities of 1,900,000,000 March 31. The Swiss franc is worth a little more than 19 cents.

Five Die in Clash

Simla, India, May 19 (AP)—Five persons were killed and 15 injured today in a clash between villagers and the police at Khuyan Sarwar in the Ferozepore district of the Punjab.

Here's Luck! Finds $10 Hidden in Pocket of New Suit

Evanston, Ill., May 19 (AP)—Some things, as the saying goes, have all the luck.

Take the case of Fred A. Goodrich. He walked into a clothing store, picked out a snappy new suit, tried it on and decided to take it.

Putting his hand in the hip pocket of the new suit, he pulled out a $10 bill.

The money had been left in the suit by a thief who previously had stolen it. The thief was captured and the suit returned to the owner of the store, who brushed it up and put it back in stock.

"I know a bargain when I see it," said Goodrich as he walked out after using the $10 to help pay for the suit.

THE PENALTY of GRAY HAIR

Gray hair—age—slipping. All these unpleasant ideas seem to go together. Yet it is not at all necessary. Gray Hair often comes to a young head and people who have it are neither old nor incapable. But how often you hear people say, "Why, she has gray hair!" and—she is on the shelf.

This penalty need no longer handicap the woman who uses Canuto Water. This is a clear, spring-like water, of wonderful properties which actually restores hair to its original girlhood color. No complicated "color plan", no danger of getting brunette shade when your hair is blonde. Not only the one kind but the one bottle is enough. It really is surprising what successful, youthifying results it gives.

Apply Canuto Water yourself, in the privacy of your own home. Many women in town are doing the same thing; they simply do not mention it. You need not mention it either. Just buy a bottle from any good druggist—and get rid of the "age penalty" in gray hair. Canuto Water is so safe, so scientific and sure that your dollar knows it will satisfy you; if not, he will refund your money. Sold and recommended by Gilchrist Co., Houghton & Dutton, Epstein Drug Co., or your own druggist.—The Canuto Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—Adv.

VIRGINIA MILLS HIT IN STRIKE BY LABOR

Danville, Va., May 19 (AP)—The resolutions committee of the Virginia State Federation of Labor today recommended for adoption by the annual convention a resolution placing responsibility for the Danville textile strike on the Riverside and Dan River cotton mills.

The resolution charged the mills with discriminations against members of the local textile union from its formation, and with an attempt to make the public believe that union organizers were agitators and foreigners. It read:

"In view of the discriminations by this company and their refusal to meet the representatives of 96 per cent of their employes and refusal to accept a friendly effort at understanding and cooperation; the responsibility for all the loss to the professional and business men of Danville during and after the strike belongs to the company as well as heavy expense to the Red Cross along with the suffering of the workers."

Fokker Planes to Take to Air Again

Washington, May 19 (AP)—Assistant Secretary Young of the Commerce Department expects many of the 1929 model Fokker planes which two weeks ago were barred from commercial passenger service to be restored to duty within 10 days.

Conferences between department officials and operators of the planes have developed new maintenance schedules for the 35 planes and the aeronautics secretary said he thought certification of air-worthiness would be issued soon.

To conquer France you need only to take Paris. To conquer Italy, you take Rome. To take London would be to conquer England.

But in Russia, if you took Leningrad and Moscow, you still would have 200,000 Russian villages to take. Fortunately, this country is in the same position. You might conquer the whole of the East and you would still have Texas and California, Illinois and a great many other states to attend to.

Here is that rare thing, a young man NOT spoiled by inherited wealth. He compares favorably with other very rich young men and women that spend their money and time in gambling houses and on the race track, and "getting their pictures in the papers."

LABOR SEEKS DATA IN PHONE RATE FIGHT

Atty. Wycliffe C. Marshall of Watertown, counsel for the Boston Central Labor Union, seeking a reduction of rates of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., today called for a mass of information relating to engineering and other service which the company receives from its affiliated companies.

The information is sought through the Public Utilities Commission for use in future hearings.

Marshall asked for a list of patented apparatus used by the company; engineering, plant and management advice and statistics furnished by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., an analysis of Massachusetts operating revenues from the angle of inter-state and intra-state expense, and classification of stations by kind of service.

BANK ACTS TO PUT SURPLUS CASH TO WORK

New York, May 19 (AP)—The world's largest bank, the Chase National of New York, announced today that, effective June 1, it would reduce the interest paid on compound interest on savings accounts to 2 per cent annually from the present rate of 2 per cent, compounded monthly.

This step followed yesterday's announcement that New York Clearing House banks were reducing rates allowed on commercial and bank deposits by half of one per cent, to the lowest levels on record, and was regarded as part of the campaign to deflect the surplus funds from banks which already find it difficult to employ money at current low interest rates.

Mutual savings banks in New York City are paying from 4 to 4½ per cent. The rise in savings deposits in New York State so far this year has been larger than the increase for all of 1930.

MOVE ASKED TO AVOID DISASTER IN EUROPE

Geneva, Switzerland, May 19—Denouncing the high tariff system as the biggest contributor to the world's economic crisis, Arthur Henderson, British foreign secretary, today called upon the pan-European commission to adopt some common plent to save Europe from economic disaster.

"We are faced with a great international dispute," he said, referring to the proposed Austro-German customs accord, "it is the first dispute of the great powers before the League of Nations."

AGREES WITH HOOVER

He proposed creation of a sub-committee to weigh all the projects suggested for general economic relief and to bring in a common plan in which all the nations might fit.

As the commission resumed its sessions late today persons usually well-informed said it virtually was certain that Arthur Henderson, British Foreign Secretary, would be chosen as president of the general disarmament conference to be held in 1932.

The League of Nations council voted formally to submit the proposed Austro-German customs accord to the World Court, but before the vote was taken Aristide Briand's suave diplomacy was needed to dissolve a threatening tension.

Canada Upholds Law Against Rum Cargoes

Ottawa, May 19 (AP)—The law of 1930 forbidding the clearance of liquor cargoes for the United States has withstood the first attack upon it in the new Conservative Parliament. A resolution designed to rescind the act was voted down yesterday without a division when the Speaker ruled it lost upon a vive voce vote.

Col. S. C. Robinson, Conservative of West Essex, Ont., who introduced the measure said in support of it that "the United States is still getting her liquor and Canada is losing the revenue."

WORDS OF WISDOM

We know it's an old story but it has been such a long time since we heard it that it handed us a laugh the other night.

Two Irishmen went to church together and listened to a sermon on the end of the world. After the service one Irishman confessed to his friend that he was still a bit hazy on the subject.

"For instance," he asked, "what is this 'Judgment Day' idea, now? How are they going to judge us all?"

His friend explained that on Judgment Day all the people of the earth would be summoned to one spot and be judged on the good or bad deeds that had been done in life.

"Everybody in the world?" asked Pat incredulously.

"Yes."

"Will all the Hibernians be there?"

"Yes."

"And the K. K. K.'s?"

"Yes."

"And the Orangemen?"

"Yes."

"Humph! There'll be dom little judgin' done THAT day!"

Billy Nixon tells us that they have the lower parts of the windows at Barrister's Hall padlocked to discourage suicides . . . However, Billy points out that if you really have your mind made up to jump out of a window at Barrister's Hall you can do so very easily by crawling through the top of the window . . . CARDINAL GLAD HE IS STAUNCH AMERICAN children, who attended the services, many of them receiving communion, listened to the Cardinal's address, which lasted 15 minutes.

Always a strong patriot, His Eminence took advantage of the occasion to reiterate his loyalty to the nation, state and city.

THANKFUL TO PUBLIC.

In this connection, he also said: "I am equally proud to know that my fellow-American citizens realize the depth of my loyalty and devotion to the country, the state and the city, and these, also, I wish to thank from my heart for all the kindness and sympathetic understanding they have on every possible occasion manifested toward me.

"To all, therefore, today I acknowledge my deep debt of gratitude which can only be repaid by continued service and devotion."

At the conclusion of the service and address the Cardinal personally greeted many of the congregation who congratulated him. Among those present were Mrs. Curtis Guild, widow of the former governor; Fire Commissioner Edward A. McLaughlin, Mrs. Thomas P. Roberts, president of the Philomathea Club, and Joseph M. Kirby, state deputy, Knights of Columbus.

CHOIR OF 100 VOICES

Five priests assisted at the mass. The Rev. Neil A. Cronin, pastor of Holy Cross Cathedral, officiated as deacon. The Rev. Richard J. Cushing was sub-deacon, the Rev. William A. Deacey, assistant priest, and the Rev. Thomas R. Reynolds and the Rev. Robert P. Barry, chaplains.

The Rev. Harry M. O'Connor was master of ceremonies and the Rev. William B. Foley had charge of the sanctuary choir, composed of 100 young boys. The seminarian choir from St. John's Seminary also participated in the services.

The Cardinal in his anniversary address said:

Thirty years ago today, in the Cathedral Church of the World, I was consecrated Bishop by a cardinal delegated to that office by the Holy Father himself, Leo XIII.

I want in the first place to express my deepest and most heartfelt gratitude to Almighty God for all the favors He has conferred upon me during all that time—first of all for the most perfect health than man can enjoy, a health and a strength which have enable me to meet each day's laborious work and to fulfill every single engagement—and, of course, there were thousands—without fail and without delay.

MOUNTAIN OF WORK

These thirty years have been literally crammed full of labors and hard work. The government and administration of a diocese so vast and so important as the diocese of Boston demands all the physical strength, all the mental, activity, all the moral courage and patience of which man is capable; and looking back today over that long space of laborious years, I marvel myself at the fact that I have not from time to time been literally crushed under the tremendous burden of care and responsibility. That that has not happened is purely a gift of God, Who, seeing that the work had to be faced and accomplished, has given His poor, unworthy servant the necessary strength to face it each day without flinching.

Within the compass of those 36 years I have felt and realized the supremest happiness one can realize on earth, and at other times I have equally sensibly felt the very depths of desolation which can try a human heart.

Such is the life of man, great heights where the sun shines clearly, and deepest valleys where for long stretches of time there is no light at all of sun nor moon nor stars, but only the certain hope that in the cold and blinding darkness one is never left entirely alone.

PRAISE FOR PRIESTS

These are the varied experiences sacred to each one's life, which can neither be revealed nor understood except in the sublimest confidence and faith in Him who either sends or permits them.

Nothing is perfect in this very imperfect world of ours, but I am stating what I think is literally true when I say that with the rarest and fewest possible exceptions the priesthood of the archdiocese of Boston by their genuine piety, their devotion to their flocks, their united sentiments of fidelity to their chief shepherd, upholding him in the tremendous work they saw he had to do—this, I repeat, more than any effort of mine, explains the marvelous progress of these 59 blessed and fruitful years. I have spoken of the rare and few exceptions, but they have been so rare and so few that they have left no trace on the tablets whereupon are recorded the progress and success of the archdiocese.

The same is true of the laity at large. Never once have I called for special co-operation on the part of the good Catholics of the diocese that they have not responded with as promptness and an eagerness which was the best proof of their fine unity and fidelity and loyalty.

THANKFUL TO ALL

To them all, priests and people of the archdiocese, I offer today my most sincere sentiments of gratitude and affection. The constant and untiring work and labor and effort between the archbishop, the priests and the people have knit us all together —very close to one another—and close, also, to the Sacred Heart of our Blessed Lord. In that strength no difficulty is impossible, for it is the strength of God, Himself, manifested in the unity, the fidelity and loyalty which prevails between the archbishop, the clergy and the laity of this, our beloved archdiocese. Our most heartfelt prayer today is that this unity and strength and loyalty may never be broken, but grow stronger and stronger until only death can sever it.

To all, therefore, today I acknowledge my deep debt of gratitude, which can only be repaid by continued service and devotion.

My last word is one of deepest appreciation for all the masses and holy communions and prayers offered to God for me today. May I speak especially of those prayers of the dear children of the diocese, who have given me such tender proofs of their affection.

I humbly and devoutly beg God's blessing upon all, that He may protect and keep us in His love and tender mercy now and forevermore.

First Lady Hostess to 'Flock of Kids' at the Circus

Washington, May 19 (AP)—Mrs. Herbert Hoover organized a group of eager youngsters today to go to the circus.

Her two grandchildren, Peggy Ann and Herbert, 3rd, headed the list of invited guests.

MONTGOMERY WAS FATALIST

math, the finding of the body of Otto Halder Larsen, Norwegian student of Technology, who had applied the poison to Pauline Clark and who, afterward, had ended his own life with the remainder of the lethal crystals.

But he lived and took a certain satisfaction from living within the walls that had seen the "college widow's" end.

Last September tragedy again entered into young Montgomery's life when Lieut. Commander Benjamin F. Staud, naval hero, committed suicide on the cruiser Houston at Southampton, England.

Staud was a friend of Montgomery, and the lieutenant commander's tragic end cut Montgomery deeply.

A few days later tragedy in the form of another friend's suicide came to Montgomery when Lieut. Woodward Phelps, recent Boston bridegroom, ended his life with his service revolver in his cabin on the U. S. S. Northampton in drydock at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Lieut. Phelps, a close friend of Montgomery's, was popularly believed to have committed suicide through grief for his friend and Annapolis classmate, Lieut. Commander Staud.

In Montgomery's effects in the Racquet Club in Washington, police found, enclosed with letters to his father, mother and sister, this note, which mystified them:

"I do not want the baby."

The mystifying note was signed, "W. Phelps."

Like most of his friends, Lieut. Wood could not understand today the sudden changes in Montgomery's mood.

"I met him in Boston, where I have been for some time in connection with my work at Harvard," said Lieut. Wood. "We spent a great deal of time together, and I can think of no single instance when he showed any actual tendency to abnormality. He had his fun like any young man, but it never stretched into wildness in the accepted sense.

"The quirk that must have twisted his mind is to me inexplicable, one of those rare departures from the normal that you don't expect. I've seen natives in the tropics run Amuck and kill right and left when they were affected by the heat. Montgomery's case is similar to theirs, but you can't even lay it to the heat.

TUNNEL ASKED TO REPLACE 'L' STRUCTURE

Demolition of the Elevated structure from Keany sq. near the North Station, to Sullivan sq., and the substitution of a tunnel to cost $8,000,000 is provided for in a bill voted upon favorably today by the legislative committee on transportation.

Of the committee of 15 members three dissented on the report. They were Senator Conde Brodbins of Revere, James G. Moran of Mansfield and Rep. Arthur A. Hansen of Waltham.

Under the terms of the bill, which was sponsored by Rep. Robert L. Lee, of Charlestown, the city of Boston would be authorized to issue bonds to cover the cost, actual construction to be under the jurisdiction of the Boston Transit Department. The bonds would run for 50 years and from the rentals to the Elevated a sinking fund would be set up to retire the bonds at the end of that period.

The approval of the city council and the mayor of Boston will be necessary in the event that the bill is passed by the legislature and signed by Governor Ely.

Rep. Lee, in commenting on the vote today, said that the fight for the removal of the Charlestown Elevated structure has been going on for more than 15 years.

TAX TO BOOST 'CHAIN' PRICES

New York, May 19—H. T. Parsons, president of F. W. Woolworth Co., views with optimism the United States Supreme Court decision upholding the Indiana chain store tax law.

He pointed out that the decision cleared the atmosphere on the question of chain store taxation and "sets a pattern to be followed by other states involving a reasonable tax that can easily be absorbed through a slight increase in retail prices."

Under the Indiana law, he said, Woolworth will pay an annual tax of about $780 on its 40 stores in that state.

Washington, May 19 (INS)—The decision of the United States Supreme Court, holding the Indiana chain store tax constitutional, was hailed today by the insurgent bloc of Congress as a great progressive victory.

SKINNY MEN

Gain pounds of weight in few weeks with new IRONIZED YEAST—a special combination of dried brewer's yeast plus iron—or pay nothing

Daily the letters pour in telling how new Ironized Yeast has added pounds of good solid flesh in few weeks. Has built up new strength and pep in nervous, tired people, has banished constipation, indigestion. Has cleared skin.

Ironized Yeast is two tonics in one —special weight-building dried brewer's Yeast and blood-enriching strengthening iron. The yeast is the same used in making malt and which makes malt so beneficial. It is specially cultured and concentrated to give the utmost in flesh-producing value. Double-tested for strength, purity and potency. Used by doctors and big hospitals.

To this concentrated dried brewer's Yeast is added three kinds of easily assimilated Iron to quickly make rich, red blood and tone up nerves and muscles. By this special process Ironized Yeast is made more effective than yeast or iron taken separately. Contains no starches, flours or gas-forming fillers. Pleasant little tablets—no nasty taste, no gas or bloating. Never spoil. Safe for everybody.

Don't have a "skinny" weak body. Go to your druggist today and get a full size treatment of Ironized Yeast. Take as directed, and if you are not delighted with quick results, your money promptly refunded by manufacturer.

Between You and Me

ANOTHER SCOTCH

A true Scotch story to add to your collection.

A man and his wife carrying four heavy bags landed at a local hotel to be met by two rushing bell boys. "I don't need two. You, here, take two bags. I'll carry one and she can take the other." When the man was telling the rest of the tale to a friend he said. "I overheard the bell boys talking among themselves in the elevator about my being a cheap skate."

Friend: "So what did you do?"

"I made up my mind then and there not to give that boy a nickel, and I didn't."

How about the man who loves music so deeply that he attends Symphony every Saturday as part of a ritual, but when he spots a hurdy gurdy within walking radius of the hall he listens as long as the man will grind and keeps plying him with nickels for more tunes?

IT'S THE NAMES THAT GET YOU!

Dr. Finnesinger, neurologist at City Hospital, and Irv Blank, chemist, were discussing how they felt about killing animals for experimental purposes. Both are supposed to be hard hearted in professional life. "Well," said Irv, "the thing I mind is the actual going in and picking one rabbit from a crowd for the killing." "Yes," admitted Fin, "and it's worse when the animals have names and have grown to be pets. When I had to put a mirror in Peter, the monkey's head so that I might study his brain, I almost envied the nurse who wept all day. I'm off this naming animals and making pets of them. You get too fond of them." Hard hearted, yeah.

Two local citizens were wending their morning way up from the South Station when they saw a man hole open, with a fence around it and a sign saying, "Men working." "What's that?" asked Bill. "Oh, hell, that's propaganda for Hoover."

Fritz Tauber is an individual in every sense of the word. He's a Viennese gentleman and printer who is an easy, delightful conversationalist. In the winter he wears wooly white mittens (they are clean every day). In the spring he goes in for extremely original boutonnieres. His latest is apple blossoms and pansies. He's exceedingly cosmopolitan, knows his own mind and walks out with decision if he happens to dislike one of Koussevitzky's modern interpretations.

They are telling one about John Lindquist's going to a photograph store for a Greig record. The girl searched and then glibly remarked "Unless he's recorded it recently, we don't have it."

AROUND AND ABOUT

At a lobster place on one of last week's cold, raw, drizzly, rainy nights (of which there was nothing else but) we saw four girls completely clad in white ducks, sailor shirts and sneakers. They made us cold to look at them. What was the idea, just a rushing of the sailing, swimming season? That same night there were more babies running loose among the lobsters . . . we never knew parents brought their entire offspring to feed on shore dinners . . . Further light on the jingle bells of the buggy mentioned last week. Friday night there was merry making on Chestnut Hill. Slipping out from the festivities were a season's debutants and her escort. They got into the buggy and went for a jingling ride. When they passed us, she shielded her face! . . . Persis Anderson, who writes very clever verse almost every week for the New Yorker, used to sit next us in geometry class and write just as clever diatribes about the teacher! . . . Why will cars that are going straight ahead continue to step on the curve so those going around have no chance of moving on the green arrow? . . . One of the most fitting wise cracks we've heard recently . . . an orchestra leader, more than a little out of patience with the jangling discordance of those in rehearsal . . . "You'd nothing but a gang of windjammers."

FIND MAN'S THUMB Is Not Best In the World!

The Hand of Man, the Thumb of Which He Developed by Abandoning Tree Life and Picking Up Things on the Ground.

FROM MODELS IN THE AMERICAN MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY, NEW YORK.

Curious Cat-like Animal Found in Forests of Malay States Has Thumb a Shade Better than Man's

WHEN man's ancestor left the trees, according to facts at the disposal of science, his thumb was small and relatively weak. . . . But after he started to shamble along the ground trying to pick up stones to throw, or to look for grubs under them, the development of man's thumb began.

That development, scientists agree, is one of the chief reasons for the pre-eminence that man has reached among all living creatures on earth. . . . Yet definite proof now establishes the fact that the best thumbs are not ours but an odd little cat-faced animal's called the Loris.

This was recently revealed after a thorough study completed at the Royal Anthropological Institute in London, England.

Of course there is a reason why the Loris's thumb is better than man's most useful digit. . . . You will find it, along with many other interesting facts about the thumbs of man and his distant cousins, in an exceptionally interesting article in The American Weekly section next Sunday. . . . Be sure to read this clever, enlightening article!

The Thumb Considered the Best in the World, Belonging to the Curious Little Animal Called the Loris.

This Is the Queer, Little Creature Called the Loris, Which Has Better Thumbs Than Man's Because It Had to Specialize in Picking Grubs Out of Tree Bark for Its Food.

RICH SILK MAN SUED FOR LOVE DAY HE DIED

New York, May 19 (AP)—A few hours before he died of heart disease last Tuesday, Hiram Royal Mallinson, head of the Fifth ave. silk house bearing his name, was served in a $1,000,000 alienation-of-affection suit brought by his son-in-law, Eugene V. Bowen. Papers in the suit charged that Mrs. Bowen, who was Lorna Mallison, committed suicide when she fell from her father's 12th floor apartment in the Hotel Marguery, 270 Park ave., April 15, 1928. The death had been listed as accidental.

Bowen, former owner of a restaurant, named both Mr. and Mrs. Mallinson in his suit, charging they broke up his marriage.

ELOPED TO MONTREAL

He and Miss Mallinson eloped early in 1926 to Montreal. According to the complaint, they attempted to wed, but were unable to do so because of the marriage laws. They returned to New York and were married in the Mallinson apartment.

Bowen declares his parents-in-law objected to his restaurant business and asked him to go into real estate. He did so, although he knew nothing about realty values, and his income was considerably cut, he declared.

The complaint says the Mallinsons asked him to move into a costly Washington sq. apartment, promising to help pay the rent. There were frequent threats of eviction, and the Mallinsons ignored his pleas for assistance, he declares.

REFUSED DOCTOR'S BILL

When his wife's child was born, Bowen charges, the Mallinsons offered to pay the bill of an expensive specialist, but at the last moment refused and he was forced to call a physician within his means.

In 1928, the complaint continued, the Mallinsons returned from Cuba, took their daughter to their apartment, refused to allow him to accompany her, and the next day placed her in a sanitarium.

On April 14, 1928, the complaint continues, an attorney for the Mallinsons informed him his wife wanted to divorce him. Bowen refused to believe it, he said. The following day, her mind deranged, Bowen charges, she jumped to her death.

BOY DEFENDS HIS DOG

The Boston Evening American learned today that the pet collie of Edward Green, 8, of 303 Cummins highway, Roslindale, isn't that kind of a dog. That is to say, it isn't the kind of a dog that runs about biting people, especially its young master.

It was said in the American yesterday that Eddie had been bitten severely, twice, by his dog, but had kept silent about the matter through loyalty to his pet. He later became so ill that it became necessary to take him to City Hospital, where it was found the dog bites might cause him permanent injury.

Last night Eddie's mother called the American office and said she wished it made plain that it was not Eddie's dog which had bitten him, but one owned by a neighbor. Inasmuch as both Eddie and his family feared that he story he had been bitten by his own dog might result in his being taken from them, the Boston Evening American welcomes the opportunity to make the correction and exonerate Eddie's pet.

CURLEY PARTY TOURS BLARNEY CASTLE

Dublin, May 19—Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, Mass.; his daughter, Mary, Miss Loretta Brenner of Chicago and City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan, were tendered a banquet last night by the Irish Free State. The party of four is visiting Ireland during a tour through Great Britain and the continent.

Gen. Mulcahy was the principal representative of the government at the dinner in the absence of President and Mrs. Cosgrave. Other guests included Frederick Sterling, American minister; James Orr Denby, secretary of the legation, and Mrs. Denby.

Today Mayor Curley will stop in Cork, visiting Blarney Castle, University College, the cathedral and Shandon Church.

Tonight he will sail from Rosslare, Ireland, arriving at Fishguard, England, and travel by sleeping car to London.

He will cross the English channel by boat Saturday. Next Sunday at 6 p. m. (eastern daylight saving time), he will broadcast from the Eiffel tower in Paris to the Empire building in New York then over the Columbia network, of which WNAC is the Boston station.

SHARKEY GIVEN HIS BIG CHECK

Winston-Salem, N. C., May 19—James Thomas Sharkey, Boston milkman who won first prize of $25,000, and other major prize winners in the recent $50,000 Camel cigarette contest, were presented with their prize checks here today by R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company.

Mrs. Walter Sweet of Brooklyn, formerly of Cambridge, Mass., received a check for $10,000 as winner of the second prize, and Julius M. Nolan, real estate man of Duluth, Minn., who won third prize, was handed a check for $5000.

Checks are being mailed to the thirty-five other prize winners. Awards included five prizes of $1000 each, five prizes of $500 each and twenty-five prizes of $100 each.

Driver Leaves Liquor Laden Auto to Police

A guilty conscience caused the driver of a sedan to leap out and run away today when Patrolman John J. Hancotte, doing traffic duty at Prison Point bridge, Charlestown, signalled for the car to stop. Hancotte gave chase, but did not capture the fleeing man.

Returning to the auto the policeman found ten gallons of moonshine within. The machine and liquor were later turned over to federal authorities. The automobile was later reported stolen to the police.

Alvah Crocker Left Estate of $4,700,000

Worcester, May 19 (AP)—Alvah Crocker, late of Fitchburg where he was engaged in the manufacture of paper, left an estate of $4,718,249.35, according to an inventory filed today in probate court. The estate included $4,704,429.35 in personal property and $13,820 in realty.

STRAY COW WOULD BE END SEAT HOG

Wandering Bovine Joins Rush Hour Patrons in Milton

Veteran end-seat hogs of the open car chuckled gutterally today when they learned of a new embarrassment of the Boston Elevated in the way of animal entertaining.

This animal was a white cow and the placid-faced bovine strolled early today into the Milton station of the Elevated, startling officials and sober customers, while horrifying customers of less steady traits.

The wandering white cow started her tour from the barn of James Lyons in Washington st., Dorchester Lower Mills, and was returned to her domicile by Patrolman Leo Hearns of Fields Corner police station.

EXPERTS GIVE WHEAT VIEWS

London, May 19 (AP)—Expert views of the world wheat crisis were emptied into the mill of the international conference after an address by Samuel R. McKelvie, head of the United States delegation, at its first open meeting today.

In rapid succession the United States, Poland, Australia and the Danubian exporters filed their views, but little detail were available.

Mr. McKelvie's speech was a resume of the situation in his country. He advocated reduced production as the surest way out of the difficulty.

The Polish and Australian plans are broadly similar. Each asks an agreement limiting exports.

Australia proposes establishment of an international marketing organization controlling wheat exports on the basis of an agreement regarding the proportion and percentage of export surpluses to be marketed co-jointly.

The discussion seemed to be drifting definitely toward a means of securing reductions in wheat acreage as a prerequisite to any agreement.

'POCKET SHIP' IS BIT TOO FAST

Kiel, Germany, May 19 (AP)—As a symbol of Germany's new naval era, the "vest pocket" cruiser Deutschland today slid into the water amid the cheers of a great throng that came from all corners of the Fatherland to pay tribute to German engineering genius.

The cruiser was launched a bit prematurely, skidding down the ways before President Von Hindenburg had time to make his speech or smash the traditional bottle of champagne across her prow.

MINER LIVES IN PALACE NOW

Edinburgh, Scotland, May 19 (AP)—James Brown, the humble miner who became a Labor M. P., once more is Lord High Commissioner, personal representative of King George; to the general assembly of the Church of Scotland.

He and Mrs. Brown are installed again at, Holyrood Palace, where today they held a levee with all the pomp and dignity of royalty. Later Mr. Brown and his wife drove in semi-state with nutriders to St. Giles' Cathedral.

Famous Hotels Use Boston Ice

The question of how ice shall be supplied to a large hotel is extremely important. Ice is used in such vast quantities—both in the refrigerating rooms and for table service—that the most economical and most satisfactory method of obtaining the ice must be found.

An honest study of comparative costs has convinced many hotel managers that ice cannot be manufactured in a hotel as cheaply as it can be bought from the Boston Ice Company.

The dinner guests at these hotels enjoy the gay tinkle of pure, crystal-clear Boston ice in their glasses—ice without a trace of cloudiness.

THIS IS THE OPEN SEASON FOR ROLLER SKATES and a very, very amusing party took place last evening at ye old-time roller rink in Nahant, arranged by the Holy Rollers and the Gold Coasters—and how they rolled.

The old ramshackle building, perched precariously on the rocks looking out to sea, fairly shook with enthusiasm; it was the most exciting evening we have spent in a long time.

VIRGINIA TAYLOR

The peppy committee, with Margy Ford as captain, watched the sunset from the rocks, meanwhile devouring sandwiches and what not, after which in the gathering twilight the gay crowd sought the arena and donned their skates.

The new fashions are divine, but we have never seen the debs and their sisters look more alluring than in the comic get-togethers which they wore—mostly original versions of the pajama ensemble.

Virginia Taylor, a post-deb and still in demand at all lively parties, was nonchalant in a yellow cambric overall suit, which we suspect she had padded in the right place for she took a couple of beautiful spills and came up smiling.

* * *

It looked like suicide to us on the side lines—how they swirled and rolled and cracked the whip, landing in a heap, and living to try it again was nothing short of miraculous.

Frequent Spills Delight All

BARBARA WARNER, IN A POLICEMAN'S HAT, DEMANDED toll from each newcomer, and they kept coming. Roddy Holton, whose nickname "Rowdy" is a term of affection, was one of the experienced; we didn't see her go down, but Lilla Draper—chic beyond words in coral angora—came acropper amid screams of laughter; also young Mrs. Edward Sturgis, Jr., handsome Eddy catching her at the right moment. It was a delight to watch the Maddens, Grace and brother Jimmy, champions both on roller and ice skates. They were members of the committee which staged the show. Grace made the Junior League this year away out from Newton.

ANOTHER DEB PRESENT was Kate Merideth Talbot in blue dungarees. It was amusing to hear a group from a couple of swains when in walked Dr. and Mrs. Talbot—Kitty was evidently going to ride home in the family car.

* * *

Rosamund Gardiner

Miss Barbara has had our vote as being one of the prettiest debs of the season, audacious, or not! And on the same subject, we have never been surprised at the popularity of Rosamond "Happy" Gardiner, who was one of the high lights in blue and yellow "pants." Anne Robbins was well protected by stalwart Hi Sibley—we told you he would be there, they have only been engaged about a week—and Frances Gardiner's rolls were being cut in on so often, we think she should go back and tip the saleslady who sold her the fetching green and white sport suit.

* * *

THEY FLASHED BY SO FAST we could not focus either our eyes or the camera but we glimpsed Kay Brown and her sister, Jane, Virginia McNeil, "Skipper" Hovey, Polly Proctor, Connie Wentworth and numerous other familiar faces. And in closing let us mention that the men were the best looking bunch of "he's" we have seen at one party in ages. And after a winter of "boiled" shirts, are you asking me were they having a good time in "T" shirts? We left them whooping it up at the place where they sell peanuts, pop-corn and fishing-tackle.

Leaders at Show

WE ARRIVED IN TOWN in time to see the last act of "Electra" at Jordan Hall. We were informed that crowds were turned away and it took four buses to bring the high-brows over the bridge from Cambridge with their silk scarves tied under their chins. We saw the James Lawrences and the Philip Daltons of Milton, the Ralph Emerson Forbes, Mrs. L. Cushing Goodhue, the Malcolm Storers, with daughter, Muriel, whose marriage takes place in about two weeks, Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Crocker with sub-deb, Miss Jane, Edith Parker, who tries to be funny in the Vincent Club shows and succeeds; Lilla Cabot Perry and Knight Sturgis.

For School Friends of Daughter

A HOUSE PARTY, WHERE everyone is sure to have an enjoyable time, will be given at Mrs. James J. Phelan's, at Manchester, on Friday, June 5. Miss Priscilla, the attractive sub-debutante of the family, will entertain about 100 of her young school friends for a week-end at the shore. And they are praying for good weather so they may stay out of doors and on the ocean; if it rained, can you imagine a flock of peppy boys and girls under one roof, even one of the largest and most beautiful roofs on the North Shore. Miss Priscilla will be graduated from Miss Winsor's this year, but is too young to make her bow with some of her schoolmates this fall.

Deb Chooses Ruffle Gown for Court

By the HON. MRS. JAMES RODNEY
(Written especially for Universal Service, Inc.)

London, May 19—Among the original dresses to be worn by American debutantes at the royal courts, which take place today and Wednesday, is a charming "off-the-shoulder" model made of stiff rose taffeta with real old lace for its fichu.

The train is of the same stiff material, while the skirt is full and caught here and there with tiny bunches of forget-me-nots to match the one fastening the fichu. Corals will be worn as the only ornaments to complete this ensemble.

One of the prettiest of the ravishing court frocks I have seen was of the large ruffle variety, of sky-blue chiffon, its floating ruffled skirt making a train at the back of masses and masses of ruffles.

The slim bodice consists of two narrow straps over the shoulders, with another beruffled band of chiffon across over the arms, giving the effect of a dropped cape held in place by pink camellias. The high waistline is covered by the same shade of pink ribbon.

Rainbow tulle constituted another enchanting model, and the frock seemed to be made of layers upon layers of different colored pieces of this feathery material.

The American cousins' anxiety to be presented knows no bounds, even though Ambassador Dawes is discouraging, as far as possible, what he calls "all this fuss and nonsense" on the part of American debutantes to be enrolled on the exclusive list.

Tiny bolero jackets or "bell-boy costees" are worn with one or two of the heavy cream satin court gowns to make them more youthful.

The design for the memorial has been approved by the Fine Arts Commission.

Prints for Afternoon Affairs

By ANN ARDEN

ONE IS inclined to sigh and say "What, prints again!" when the first van load of them arrive in the spring mode. Yet there is not one of us that can resist having at least one frock in the latest printed pattern being exploited. It is the same with lace—using it for trimming on frocks is not a bit new, still it remains one of the most satisfying fashions in vogue. And why is this? Why don't we just ignore the repeated fashionable sallies of prints and lace?—because new effects in pattern and coloring are achieved in prints to make them over a fresh joy. And lace can always find some new way to appy itself to a frock that seems to be the most charming version you have seen yet!

BESIDES both pattern and coloring this season, there are sleeves to add variety to the old theme. No dress can be commonplace or a tiresome repetition that insists on doing the gayest, most unexpected things with its sleeves. Placed here, cut off there, perhaps only mere cups—such is the way sleeves are being done in this spring of 1931.

* * *

FLATTERING and summery is the costume pictured, perfect for the guest to wear to Graduation, Class Day, or any formal afternoon function. It could well be an old bridesmaid frock, or for one involved "day-light dining," too.

THE CHIFFON in green and beige has a rather vague and shaded flower design, closely merged and posed over a silk slip in egg-shell tone. The frock has a softly moulded bodice; cape sleeves, and circular skirt. The surplice front of the little coatee ties about the waist, while its circular wrist ruffles are attached to the sleeves by lattice bands of chiffon. The hat is lovely, of pliable, rough white straw, its oven-brim and twin bows of white organdie. Plain white kid pumps, and pale suntan hose complete the picture.

FOR SO many summer seasons the only white hats we could dare to have were those of stiff Panama or some such straw as that. Now we can do white in almost any of the millinery mediums and stand foremost in the ranks of fashion.

* * *

NO LONGER can it be said that it is smart to be homely, for if you look at only the hats of the season you will see that there is not a chance for the plain girl to remain plain.

Title "Mrs." Is Retained

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My bark of matrimony went on the rocks, and not wishing to be reminded of the unhappy affair every time I was addressed, I asked for, and was granted by the court, the restoration of my maiden name with my divorce. Now I am having cards engraved, and have struck a snag.

I have been told that it is never correct, once a woman has been married, for her to use the title of "Miss." However, I must have some title on my cards, and as I now use my maiden name, Gertrude Browman, exclusively, must I use the form "Mrs. Gertrude Browman?" This seems very awkward and I do not care for it at all. What, then, shall I use?

STILL ANOTHER READER.

This always is an awkward question of title, as you say. Some women do take back the entire maiden name, title and all, but usually the title of MRS. is used. After these circumstances, with the maiden name.

NO NEED TO EAT TASTELESS PEAS

Their Appealing Flavor Can Be Restored by Adding Sugar

Green peas, fresh-picked, are a delicious and important food. However, when they are taken off the vines they begin to lose their flavor and distinctive sweetness.

It is a good rule whenever you serve peas to add "a dash of sugar to a pinch of salt" as they cook. The salt overcomes flatness and the sugar restores the natural sweetness which has been lost. This combination of sugar and salt produces equally delicious results in the cooking of most vegetables whether canned or fresh.

Many cooks keep a mixture of sugar and salt within reach. Some use two parts sugar to one part salt—some, equal parts. Either combination is splendid for seasoning meats and stews and also in the making of salad dressings. Flavor and season with sugar, The Sugar Institute.

JANE COWL GREETED WARMLY IN "ART AND MRS. BOTTLE" ROLE

Comedy in Plymouth Premiere

The Cast

Michael Bottle..... Lewis Martin
Judy Bottle..... Myrna Fremont
Annie Tupper..... Estelle Lisle
Butler..... George Seaman
George Bottle..... Walter Kingsford
Celia Bottle..... Jane Cowl
Charlie Dawes..... Henry Richards
Max Eighty ... Leon Quartermaine

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

In the case of "Art and Mrs. Bottle," now comfortably housed at the Plymouth, there was brought about a new descent upon the town by Jane Cowl. If the comedy was not especially cramped with strict morality in its episodes, the consequences were satisfactory. Miss Cowl, of course, plied faithfully at her own familiar and, we must add, excellent arts and graces. Upon this occasion the little tricks of gesture and voice, the ever present handkerchief and the occasional spread of that slender hand across a very white and well-rounded throat, seemed especially appropriate to the married lady just returned home from 20 years of running around with other men.

"Art and Mrs. Bottle" was sophisticated; it was brittle. Miss Cowl and the players who ranged the stage with her made it good entertainment. You could not agree with many of the author's premises, but you could laugh heartily at the antics of his characters. It was a comedy of sin in the good old orthodox sense. If anything was to be learned from Nicholas Young Ross Lorraine's play it was that manner always knows best, even when she has failed to follow her own rules. As she remins Mrs. Bottle, who had deserted her husband for a philandering artist, Miss Cowl stepped into the first act just in time to save the little lady's self-respect, grown up but still a little Evelyn.

There was a senior Mr. Bottle, who had given his life to the manufacture of lavatory equipment—he called himself a sanitary engineer. A strong gentleman, thoroughly honest, he bestowed small sympathy upon you. You could hardly censure him for that; for an artist with glib tongue and quick ways had stolen his wife, and now, 20 years later, the same busy boy of paint and palette was about to turn a similar trick upon the daughter. Except for poor old Bottle, everybody in the family ran heavily to art and artists. Into this upsetting situation came the long-forgotten wife and mother; she was not repentant, but she was willing to help. Having arranged his characters, the author retired and left the rest of it to Miss Cowl.

Jane Cowl is always greeted warmly in Boston; the playgoer here has wept with her as Juliet and has laughed with her as the gay girl of Rome who made pleasant hours for Hannibal. Miss Cowl has that richest of theatrical favors—a following. These good friends were out in force last night to stretch hands across the footlights as she thrust and parried in skirmishes with husband and children, and with the man who proposed to make a double silling in the Bottle household. To Walter Kingsford must Miss Cowl offer up thanks for a helpful performance. As the obtuse Mr. Bottle his pace was swift; it kept Miss Cowl on her toes. Even the players descended the night's heaviest toll; between them "Art and Mrs. Bottle" was turned into entertainment that would stir the enthusiasm of any audience. Leon Quartermaine played an unsympathetic role uncomfortably well. There was small sympathy for him. Faithfully following their leaders, appeared Lewis Martin, Naren Evensen, Lucille Lisle and Henry Richards. These were the youngsters that made the comedy tipstanding; its best excuse for all the spirited work set up by Miss Cowl, Mr. Kingsford and Mr. Quartermaine.

"Art and Mrs. Bottle" arrived at an unexpected conclusion and expressed itself pleasingly. Art, it reminded you, is something for art's sake, while sanitary engineers are God's blessing to humanity. In the meantime you had laughed until your chair was loosened from its anchorage and its arm piece had clattered into the aisle.

Lady Conan Doyle Talks for Hearst Metrotone News

Hearst Metrotone News Globe Trotter has received the first and exclusive statement from Lady Conan Doyle concerning her belief that she has received many messages from her husband, the late Sir Arthur, and that she is constantly getting more. This amazing and exclusive interview is contained in the issue of Hearst Metrotone News.

Lady Doyle, in her interview says, among other things:

"Apart from having messages continually from various mediums, we have had the most wonderful message in our home, shown, too, through mediums far apart from us, sometimes abroad. My husband has shown an intimate knowledge of what is going on in our private affairs, in our own home.

"Believe me, if I were offered all the wealth of London and of New York, I would refuse them a thousand times over and rather live in a two-room shack than give up this knowledge which brings such infinite happiness, comfort, hope and joy to the human heart."

A magnificent picture showing more than 60 airplanes in perfect flights for the nation's dress army sky maneuvers. The flights a wonderful formation was shown over Kelly Field in Texas, and give a hint of what may be expected to be seen throughout the country when the big show takes place.

The result of a recent visit of the stork to the zoo is shown in Mrs. Pigmy Hippo with a new bouncing Pigmy Hippo girl baby, and proud Mrs. Zebra who recently bore a manly colt. Trotsky, the big brown bear, shows children how to sit up at the table, and Mr. and Mrs. Bullfrog are seen to have succumbed to the cigarette habit.

Sidney, Australia, sends a most sensational picture of its jumping horses, which animals attempt to clear bars much higher than themselves. There are cows who make the leaps, but many of them crash in thrilling style. The Globe Trotter presents a novel set of pictures intended to teach you how to dive gracefully.

'The Viking' at Park Saturday

The Park Theater will screen, beginning next Saturday, "The Viking," filmed and recorded in sound in Newfoundland and off the ice-bound coast of Labrador. These authentic backgrounds provide the setting for a tense dramatic story of the rivalry of two sealers for the love of a woman.

The Viking" was being made when the sealing vessel, after which it was named, was destroyed by an explosion near Heine Island, off the northern coast of Newfoundland.

Particularly thrilling are said to be the scenes which show the hazardous seal hunts in which over 250 real sealers participated. An excellent cast includes Charles Starrett, Louise Huntington, Arthur Vinton and the world-famous skipper, Capt. Bob Bartlett.

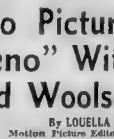
Radio Pictures to Make "Reno" With Wheeler and Woolsey in Cast

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, May 19—The suns of Reno are going to be uncovered. If it isn't going to be done one way it will be done another. Radio Pictures is the first to tell the world that their vermon will be called "Reno," after the famous divorce city, and that it will be a burlesque. Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey are the two who will go through the divorce mill.

Edna May Oliver and Joseph Cawthorn are two other well known funsters who will add their comedy to "Reno," and I suppose it will be made in Nevada. With three companies working in Reno, Warner Brothers, Paramount and Radio Pictures, the divorces will have a rival for attention. Movies are always interesting everywhere.



Louella O. Parsons

Louis Sarecky, who will supervise "Reno," has just been given a new long term contract.

THERE will be no more racketeer pictures made. We have heard plenty about gangster stories being frowned upon by women's clubs and churches. Five states have now taken definite action by refusing to show any more gangster pictures in their cities. That does not mean, however, gangster pictures already made but it means the pictures made after 1931. The new law goes into effect in 1932. "The Public Enemy" is one picture, I think, that will not have a bad influence. It points a very decided moral against these racketeers and members of the unsavory underworld. The two boys who do well for themselves in The Public Enemy" are to be rewarded by First National. James Cagney and Edward Woods, the two who join the gang here in Chicago and pay the penalty, will have important roles in "The Blue Moon Murder Mystery," starring Walter Huston. This is by S. S. Van Dine and one of his typical thrillers.

OUR LITTLE Sally O'Neil, who had such bad luck for a long time, is getting a break again. Ivan Kahn, her agent, who has always believed that all Sally needed was one or two good roles to put her right back on her feet, has just signed her to play opposite Regis Toomey in "Murder by the Clock."

I KNOW OF no one who works more intensively than Bebe Daniels. Once she gets into a picture she studies the script, she rehearses and really lives the part until she is through. Her next story, as soon as she finishes "The Honor of the Family," is to be "Strictly Confidential."

War on Slavers Shown in Film

"Fighting the Slavers" will open a limited engagement at the Majestic on Friday evening, May 29. It is unlike any other so-called propaganda picture of its kind in that a truly dramatic story has been written around the persons and the places included in the film. Forming a background for the story, is the detailed and authentic information concerning this wide-spread evil which has been compiled in one of the most thorough investigations that has ever been undertaken by any organization.

World-wide in scope the picture takes you in quick succession to Vienna, Berlin, Budapest Athens, Constantinople and all the other continental cities. In the making of this startling film the producers had the wholehearted co-operation of the police authorities in the above-mentioned cities.

Jerri Back as Howard Star

At the Old Howard this week is Jerri McCauley, a singer and dancer of ability. Miss McCauley scores with her chic mannerisms and her stepping specialty. She appears as an extra added attraction. The burlesque is furnished by the "Palm Beach Scandals." The comedy is well handled by Billy Fields and Chuck Callahan.

The cast also has Febe Almond, Billie Holmes, Holly Leslie and Ann Reeves. These girls are skilled in the height of stage style and contribute to the success of the production.

Other features supplied by the Howard include Paddy Saunders, comedy cartoonist with a side-line of patter and the Kelo Brothers in an entertaining acrobatic novelty.

"Third Little Show" to End Boston Run May 29

"The Third Little Show," first scheduled for a fortnight at the Wilbur, and then an additional three days, is to stay five days more and is now definitely set to close its Boston engagement Friday night, May 29. These five days have been added due to the record breaking demand for seats to see this new revue and to allow the insertion of several new sketches and songs for the Broadway opening which is now set for Monday, June 1, at the Majestic Box.

Miss Yurka Stars in Tragedy

Blanche Yurka, in the title role of Sophocle's tragedy, "Electra," presented by Robert Henderson, under the auspices of the Harvard Dramatic Club, thrilled an audience that filled Jordan Hall last evening with one of the most brilliant performances of her career.

Stripped to summary the dramatic narrative is given in the Shepard translation and elemental in its tale of human passion and vengeance. Electra, Agamemnon's daughter, bides oppression for vengeance; waiting for the return of her brother, Orestes, to which they may do the will of the gods upon the traitorous and murderous Clytemnestra. The chorus of Theban women lead by the distinguished dancer Martha Graham, set the atmosphere of tragedy and evil and carried it throughout.

Obviously the treatment of such a fable is everything Sunday, with beautiful restraint and economy of motion. Blanche Yurka's characterization achieved the utmost in simplicity, and yet gained the effect of inner fire and depth.

With the way so prepared, a company of reciprocating players, played in the same key of reverence and impressive restraint; with Robert Henderson, as Orestes, giving perhaps the most outstanding performance of the supporting cast. Doris Rich was most satisfactory as the queen mother, Clytemnestra.

"Strange Interlude"

Eugene O'Neil's stage hit, "Strange Interlude," will be on the M-G-M production schedule next season, it is announced.

Revue Tops Big Bill at Scollay

Heading the stage show at the Scollay this week is a song, dance and musical act, appropriately called the "Show-Boat Revue." The act is set on the deck of a gayly decorated boat, and the entertainment consists of a band, led by a fine singer, and assisted by a fine dance team called Blue and White. A good eccentric dancer also takes part.

Opening the show is an act familiar to old time theatergoers, called the Breats family, consisting of excellent juggling by Harriet Breats and acrobatic dancing by Mickey Breats. Next on the bill is Dotson, also familiar to vaudeville-followers of years ago. This dancer has lost none of his pep, and his famous "fit" dances still scores.

Sam Bernard, 2d, follows with his company in a specially written skit entitled "Four's a Gang." The "Show-Boat Revue" then comes on for 20 minutes of diversified entertainment. Paula and Al Blum close the show with artistic balancing.

WOMAN FIGHTS FOR $10,000 IN WILL

A fight to retain a $10,000 bequest in the will of Frederick H. Matthews, retired Chelsea paper manufacturer, was opened today in Suffolk court by Mrs. Bridget A. Cusack, "housekeeper and friend" of Matthews, who died last October.

The will is contested by Mrs. Katie Hunneman and Harry V. Mason, first cousins of Matthews, both of Portland, Ore.

They charge unsound mind and undue influence. Matthews left $140,000 to Boston University and other sums to charitable institutions.

Under questioning of Attorney Michael Reardon of Salem counsel for Mrs. Hunneman and Mason, Mrs. Cusack denied she saw Matthews before Matthews death.

She said she was employed by Matthews for 22 years and cared for him during illnesses from his retirement in 1914 to his death in 1930.

Others who testified today were Charles J. Hobart, counsel for the Broadway National Bank (trustee), Francis Hawley and several Dun & Bradstreet clerks. They were witnesses to the will.

KILLED, TRYING TO BE LAWYER

Hartford, Ct., May 19 (AP)—Joseph H. Higgins, 3, a law student who since 1902 had sought through the courts to obtain admission to practice at the bar, going to the Supreme Court and recently to the General Assembly for aid, which was denied him, is dead.

Medical opinion was that his efforts to obtain action by the General Assembly on petitions he had failed had overtaxed his strength. Pneumonia and complications followed.

From the outset it has never been made known why the examining committee refused to endorse his application for admission.

Mayor Kills Rival

Tulcea, Rumania, May 19 (AP)—The mayor of Tulcea has removed some opposition to his re-election. He shot his opponent dead.

ELY TO ATTEND CONVENTION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS

By NANCY BREWSTER

Representatives of more than 150,000 Bay State clubwomen met at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, today for the opening session of the three-day convention of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Federated clubs from every part of the Commonwealth sent delegates to hear state reports and speech state policies for clubwomen with a view to pursuing a comprehensive program in the field.

The meeting was opened by Mrs Carl L. Schrader, state president.

TO ATTEND

Upon arrival the guests to the fact and invocation pronounced by Rev. Francis Campbe Jr. Mrs. Lawrence C. Putnam, director of the ninth district, extended the greetings of her district to the club leaders, members and state officials.

By tomorrow when the convention is in full swing, 250 to 300 clubwomen of the state are expected to be in attendance, the climax of the convention to come on Thursday evening when Gov. Ely attends the Federation Governor's Night.

Salem, which has welcomed the clubwomen for many years in succession, again greeted the attending visitors and through R. Ware Greene of the board of selectmen, the town wished for continued patronage by the women.

PROF HART TO SPEAK

Rules of the convention were read following reports by Mrs. Henry M. Holbrook, recording secretary; Mrs. Carroll K. Wetherbee, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Clinton Farrar, aide, Mrs. Frank P. Bennett, chairman of finance; Mrs. Irene S. Flint, treasurer, Mrs. Hiland Hyde, treasurer of the revolving fund; Mrs. Thomas J. Walker, auditor; Mrs. Herman A. Hattaway, Federation extension; Miss Alice P. Pitts, Federation topics; Mrs. Francis A. Bagnall, Federation pin; Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, nominating committee; Mrs. Fred L. Pierce, department program, and Mrs. Lawrence F. Ladd, resolutions committee.

District directors were to make their reports this afternoon, preceded by the presentation of new clubs admitted into Federation membership.

Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart was to make the afternoon's principal address, "George Washington" is to be his title.

Tax Money Goes Back

Washington, May 19 (INS)—These income tax adjustments were announced by the Treasury Department today: Norton Co., Worcester, $196,220; Eaton, Crane & Pike Co., Pittsfield, $25,820.

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"REACH FOR A LUCKY INSTEAD"

Place your finger on your Adam's Apple. You are actually touching your larynx—this is your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. When you consider your Adam's Apple, you are considering your throat—your vocal chords.

What is the effect of modern Ultra Violet Rays upon tobacco? Dr. E. E. Free, one of America's well-known scientists, who was retained by us to study Lucky Strike's manufacturing process, addressing the Illuminating Engineering Society, said:

"The essential effect of the Ultra Violet is the production of better tobacco and of cigarettes regarded by virtually all smokers who have tested them as milder and with a lesser tendency to cause throat irritation."

Here in America LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette that employs Ultra Violet Rays in connection with its exclusive "TOASTING" Process—the only cigarette that brings you the benefits of the exclusive "TOASTING" Process which expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos.

DOLLY WHIRLED AWAY IN FLASH'S NEW CAR

PERHAPS YOU'VE never heard of Flash Gebney—tha' wouldn't be surprising, for he is now in jail and likely to remain there for a good many years, and although he still vows he will do dire things when he gets out, the woman in the case merely laughs.

There's a reason for that—one of the best—she knows that Flash can never find her—she's happily married and a mother, and she's living in a small settlement on the edge of California.

Flash had earned his title by his sartorial good taste. He dressed in the so-called pink of fashion but really he wasn't flashy at all.

Before he embarked on the beer racket he was a foreman in a shirt factory. The funny part about him was his abstinence. He didn't drink and he rarely smoked. Besides he had a way with him and if he'd been content to take things a little s—he might have been—but what's the use of speculating—he probably thought it over—he's had plenty of time

Easy Money Calls
Flash Wanted Cash

Flash wanted easy cash and he knew some of the boys in the rum game. They always had spending money and they talked big. They liked Flash and finally persuaded him to join them.

From the first he cleaned up; from the first he took command; he was cut out to be boss.

Then he met Dolly Squires—she was pretty, dark, vivacious, earning her own living and living on what she earned. Flash ran across her at a dance and fell for her hard.

There was something independent about her—that appealed to Flash—she wasn't a gold digger. Flash was in the racket to make money, but he had his dreams and one of them was about cashing in and living pretty.

He met Dolly frequently, but he was always evasive about his business.

"Come on, Big Boy," she would say to him, "what do you do for a living?"

"See that car," said Flash, pointing to the roadster in which he often took her riding, "well, I ain't working in a laundry, am I?"

She resisted all his efforts to lure her into the easy luxury of a love nest. With a laugh she refuted all his arguments against marriage as an outmoded ceremony.

Keeps Her Job
In Specialty Shop

Dolly kept her job in the smart specialty shop, where she sold things she could never afford to buy, and pondered on "Flash" Gebney. Probably he was a business man—probably, but possibly he was in the rum racket. She was under no illusion as to his intentions; he had made them plain, but the trouble was she loved him.

And yet she resented his secrecy as to his personal affairs he puzzled her—could a girl love a man she did not wholly trust?

"I'll tell you, Kid," said Flash one evening as he drove her through the park, "I'm going to have a piece of good news for you soon."

She begged for further information, but Flash grinned.

"Actions speak louder than words," he remarked. "I'll pick

ELY IN AGE TAX PARLEY WITH SALTONSTALL

Gov. Ely and Speaker Leverett Saltonstall conferred today on the problem of financing the Old Age Assistance Bill, prior to renewal of the same discussion on the floor of the House.

After coming from his conference with the Governor, Speaker Saltonstall attended the regular Tuesday luncheon of chairmen and clerks of legislative committees, where, it is understood, the problem also was discussed.

Meanwhile Minority Leader Leo F. Birmingham and Rep John V Mahoney, both of Boston, were attempting to line up enough votes in the House lobby to support the proposed $1 special tax, to be known as the Old Age Assistance tax.

The problem was made more complex when the House session got under way, because of the number of bills on the subject dumped into the session by the House Ways and Means Committee.

TO RECONSIDER ACTION

The House had as its first problem reconsideration of its action of last week in rejecting various methods proposed, such as the tobacco, income and poll and head taxes. The motion has been made by Representative Mahoney and was expected to be adopted.

Mahoney, who, as Representatives Timothy J. Cronin of Cambridge, and Roland D. Sawyer of Ware, have conferred with Governor Ely, will urge that a new $1 tax to be known as old-age assistance tax be imposed on males 20 years and over to run for two years.

Governor Ely paved the way for the introduction of Mahoney's motion while speaking last night before the Dolly Madison Clubs of Lynn and Salem, at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

The Legislature, he said, particularly the Democratic members, should "take what they can get."

He said that the people of the State were promised the measure, and it should not be held up because of lack of agreement as to the proper methods.

PROMISE TO FULFILL

"Under the conditions," he said, pointing out that the parties disagreed as to the particular tax most fitting, "any kind of a tax the boys will agree on is better than no tax at all and breaking the promise of 1930 by postponing the operation of the bill. I hope the Democratic members will put it ahead of any fears for the danger of a particular form of taxation.

"Some form should be enacted with the distinct understanding that a permanent method of taxation will be given proper consideration in the next Legislature. If the Republicans won't agree to the form desired by the Democratic members, the latter should take the best they can get and keep the law on the books. If they think, it will be necessary for me to send a message suggesting postponement of the operation of the law."

The governor also created some surprise when he attacked the proposed redistricting plan recently agreed upon by the legislative committee, declaring that "the bill is not fundamentally correct."

WOMAN STANDS UP FOR SALEM BANKER

"Nothing Proved," She Says as Police Continue Hunt for Missing Man

"They haven't proved anything yet.

"There must be some misunderstanding."

With these and other statements, pretty Helen Bedard, 23-year-old housekeeper for Ralph A. Punchard, missing Salem bank official, executor and treasurer, rose to his defense today.

While officials of the Merchants National Bank were announcing "no definite shortage found yet," Miss Bedard expressed hope Punchard would return home to face his accusers.

Punchard is sought on federal and State warrants charging larceny from the bank and the Salem Chamber of Commerce respectively. Audits of the Annie G. Spinney estate, of which he was executor, are also being conducted.

A final audit of his accounts as assistant treasurer of the North Shore Hospital showed no shortage, officials there said.

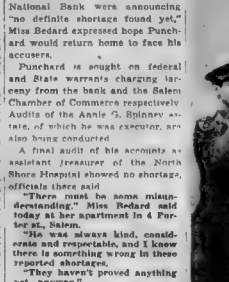
"There must be some misunderstanding," Miss Bedard said today at her apartment in 4 Porter st., Salem.

"He was always kind, considerate and respectable, and I know there is something wrong in these reported shortages.

"They haven't proved anything yet, anyway."

Miss Bedard indignantly denied reports she was at one time a night club hostess or had a marriage "understanding" with Punchard. She branded the reports as "ridiculous and untrue."

Department of Justice circulars were sent through the United States and Canada today in the manhunt for Punchard. They cite the federal warrant charging misappropriation of $2500 from the national bank



Ralph A. Punchard, ousted cashier of a Salem bank, whose accounts are alleged to be short, is a fugitive from justice, hunted by federal and State officers. Today his home was searched by officials.

SCHOOLHOUSE BOARD HEAD IN HOT REPLY

Commission to Spend $90,000 This Summer on Plumbing in 12 Buildings

This is the fifth of a series of articles on Boston schools, what they have and what they lack and the need for more and more modern schools.

"Frank A. Goodwin, chairman of Boston Finance Commission did all in his power to prevent the Legislature from giving the Boston school committee money for elementary school buildings during the present session," said Richard Lane, chairman of Boston Schoolhouse Commission, in reply to an attack by Mr. Goodwin.

In his statement, Mr. Goodwin said it was about time Mr. Lane and the other members of the schoolhouse commission got busy and made Boston schools safe for the children, citing the need of fire escapes on 97 schools

"Mr. Goodwin tried to prevent the Legislature from giving the Boston school committee money for school buildings," added Mr. Lane, "notwithstanding that the mayor and others advocated giving the school committee money to enable them to start on a $5,000,000 building program."

The campaign of the Boston Evening American for more and better schools has aroused authorities to action and evoked from Mr. Lane the statement that $90,000 will be spent this summer in doing away with latrines and obsolete plumbing in 12 schools.

12 SCHOOLS TO BE ALTERED

In its campaign, the American pointed out that some of the schools have out of doors toilets and that many have the latrine system, which has been condemned by health authorities

According to Mr. Lane, the following schools will be

Jennifer Begs for Help After Rarick's Violent Outburst Over Letter

By Fannie Hurst

(Copyright, 1929, by Fannie Hurst.)

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

STANDING IN the multiplying mist-sure of her mirrors, Jenny's hand, emerald-incrusted, flew to her throat. What had happened? Rarick knew something! He always did when he looked like that. Dry teeth bare. Terror flew at her. Terror and a sudden loathing for the whole tottering structure of her affair with Ramon.

As a keeper of a gigolo she had risked everything. Why minor matters? Keeper of a gigolo! And at risk of security, prestige, eminence. The neuralgic pain that was lurking in her side seemed to leap into her throat—into her spirit. What had she pulled down about her? What terrible crash was impending?

Like a Skull

Out of her recklessness, out of her failure to rest contented with the security of her eminence, was she about to reap still more failure?

"Rarick," she cried out to him, ready, as it were, to fight for her life, "don't be a fool!"

How terrifyingly like a skull he was.

"Where is Jennifer?" he said along his dry jowls. "I want her."

Jennifer? Thank God, then it wasn't Jenny! Jennifer, of course. Some nonsense of Jennifer's. This wretched nervousness of hers!

"She must be dressing."

"Call her."

"What has happened, Rarick?"

"Call her."

"The child is probably in her bath. Is it as imperative as all that?"

"Call her."

"Tell Miss Jennifer," she said in French to the maid in the Breton cap, "to come here at once. Her father wishes her."

"I wouldn't start rowing with Jennifer this time of the evening, Rarick. What's wrong? Won't it keep until—"

The maid returned

"Miss Jennifer is dressing and is already late for an appointment. She will come to Mr. Rarick in the library tomorrow morning."

Rarick strode past the words, across the hall, and, without preamble of knocking, into his daughter's suite.

Jennifer Rebels

"Rarick," cried Jenny, and strode after, "don't be a fool!"

Jennifer, evidently just risen from bed, was sitting on the edge of it, in a web of a nightgown that fell off her shoulder to the elbow and pulling on a bit of infinitesimal stocking.

"Why, Father," she cried and jerked a bit of the web across her, "you mustn't come in here!"

His hatred of the sight of undress even in the formal attire of the women of his family. This Aphrodite rising from the foam of lace and chiffon offended him less than the bare backs they were tanning into the waistline of evening gowns

"Put on some clothes," he said. From the layer of tousled bed-clothing of more pink and more lace, his daughter regarded him threw a scowl at a tangle of hair that had fallen forward over her eyes.

"I think this is pretty thick, father," she said.

Her mother picked up this [illegible] down robe and tossed it on her.

"Put this on, Jennifer," she said in the cold, measure-tones of her disapproval of Rarick.

What a bore—what a bore this man was Joyless. Still a hardware clerk at heart. Little man, you. No wonder the flame that burned in Ramon was warming to her cold heart. Thank God

HARBOR BRIDGE PLAN OPPOSED BY SHIPPERS

Vigorous opposition was voiced today to the proposed Boston-Nantasket harbor bridge at a hearing held by the maritime affairs committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

As they opposed the original measure, representatives of shipping interests and others also opposed the amended bill, which provides for assessing any expense on cities and towns benefited, if the state has to take over the private enterprise.

Prediction that the ways and means committee of the Legislature would reject the bill was made by Secretary Edward G. Morris of Quincy, who said the only proponents were in Suffolk and Plymouth counties.

Others opposed included Col. J. Hubert Houzdon of the American International Engineer Associates, who said the bridge would seriously interfere with harbor developments; George Voler, secretary of the Foreign Commerce Club; Frederick A. Mayberry, secretary of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce; Edward Hamlin, president of the Boston Terminal Association, who said it would interfere with development of the "new pasture" section of South Boston and the Fore River Shipbuilding Co.

Frederic H. Fay, consulting engineer retained by the company which wishes to build the bridge highway, suggested an alternate to the starting from Neponset instead of South Boston.

POLE FALLS ON WALTHAM ROOF

Four families in a two-story wooden block at 428-432 River st., Waltham, early today were awakened by an electric light and telegraph pole falling on the roof.

The pole, rotted at the base, mapped shortly after 2 a. m. and crashed on the house, the second cross-arm piercing the roof.

Mrs. Joseph Mullen, who lives in No. 432 with her family said she believed someone was trying to enter the house.

The other families in the house are those of Calogero Pinzone Arthur Whitney and Angelo Mobello, the owner.

28-YEAR PUBLIC CONTROL IS PROVIDED

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

An increase of carfares on the Boston Elevated, to be effective July 1, has been averted by the 28-year public control bill adopted by the Legislature and to be sent to Gov. Ely today for his approval.

Two definite schemes of carfare increase, either of which could have been put into actual operation on the complicated L system, had been worked out by a corps of experts under direction of General Manager Edward Dana.

One of them is believed to have been the elimination of transfers. The other is understood to have been a rate elevation on the existing five-cent lines.

In any event, General Manager Dana said

"An 11-cent fare, a dime and a penny, would have been a nuisance and utterly impossible."

DEFICIT IS $500,000

Dana revealed that because of the tremendous falling off in general riding, the Elevated's revolving fund of $1,000,000 has been wiped out, and that a deficit of $500,000 beyond that actually exists.

The bill adopted by the Legislature will effect an interest savings on the capital investment of about $1,875,000, according to Dana.

"About $1,000,000 of that amount can be applied to reduced cost of operation," he said, "and with the other economies we have been putting into operation, the increase of fare can be avoided.

"Also, we will be enabled to return to the city and towns of the Metropolitan Transit area the $1,350,000 which they had been assessed to meet previous deficits resulting from operation."

Despite the decrease in traffic, Boston has stood up well in comparison with the other great cities of the country, Dana said. The toll off here has been about 50 per cent, against the national average of about 12 per cent.

"L" IS ESSENTIAL

"We believe our service is good," said Dana. "The men are working loyally and in a great spirit of co-operation Their wages have been fair, because, while they have seemed high, the men have been able to perform more work than ever before, due to improvement in the art of transportation. The Boston Elevated has shown that public officials, answerable to the public and not to the private stockholders, can serve intelligently and efficiently."

Dana declared that the facilities of the Elevated must be expanded rather than diminished despite the reduction in general riding.

"We are carrying 46 per cent of all our passengers during the four rush hours, two in the morning and two in the afternoon," he said. "In any cold or snowbound day of Winter, an additional 50,000 passengers are likely to be dumped upon us. They do not use us regularly, but when they can't make the city in their autos, they expect us to be ready for them without a moment's notice.

"Rapid transit is, and will continue to be, the backbone of Boston. It is the cheapest transportation. Autos consume valuable space in the public highway. If the Elevated were eliminated Boston's streets could not accommodate motor traffic; Boston could not do business."

Dana suggested that the car riders at some time in the future, will be saved the cost of tunnels and subways now borne entirely by them.

"The car riders have paid for new streets for the City of Boston, underground streets," he said, "and they have paid the bill which has enabled Boston to do business on the surface streets."

If the 28-year control bill becomes effective through Gov. Ely's approval, the Metropolitan Transit District will issue about $1,000,000 in bonds at a very low per cent to replace the existing preferred stock, now paying seven and eight per cent. This is the saving in fixed charges that will be applied to keeping the carfare raise off, together with the reduction from six to five per cent of the dividends now obtained by holders of the common stock.

The car riders will pay six per

16 WIN PRIZES AT B. U. REVIEW

More than 500 members of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps unit of Boston University passed in review today on Boston Common before officials of the university to end their instructions for this year at the school.

After the review before President Daniel L. Marsh, E. Ray Speare, treasurer, trustees, members of the faculty and reserve officers, 16 individual prizes were awarded.

Sophomore winners were L. Donoghue of Boston, J. D'Orlando of Revere and P. G. Kelliher of Brockton

J. H. Worden of Jamaica Plain, Louis Goldstein of Roxbury and J. F. Mosher of Middletown, Ct., won the freshman prizes.

For general excellence as privates, J. Coakley of Medford and L. Mandell of New London, Ct., were awarded gold medals and J. S. Campbell of Brighton, H. A. Gorenstein of Allston and W. J. Suran of Racine, Wis., won first, second and third respectively in manual of arms.

Arthur G. Horne of Brookline was awarded a silver loving cup for attaining the highest score in the corps area rifle matches.

TIP ON HUGE RAID WINS

The biggest liquor raid in this section in years, with its thrilling details and the capture of 23 men, won $15 for an alert reader of the Boston Evening American last week.

This was first prize in the weekly news tip contest and goes to one whose name must be withheld.

The second prize of $10, like that of last week, again must be divided owing to the closeness of news values. Both tips, however, were concerned with the Arlington automobile crash that claimed the lives of two persons.

One person who flashed the first tip on the accident and another who secured a picture of a girl victim will receive checks for $5 each.

The third prize of $5 was awarded to C. D. Stemmler of 973 Columbus ave., Boston, who told of the cut and dog raid on the home of Dr. Mary E. Jones on James st., South End. The speedy tip enabled this newspaper to be first with the news and pictures.

Many other good tips were received during the week, many of which would have reached the Boston Evening American through routine but at the same time proved valuable for their speed.

Eugene Bubeuilleu of 1014 Saratoga st., East Boston. Fire in a two-family house.

Joseph Cohen of 1 Bowdoin st., Salem. Arrest of a Newburyport man for alleged attack on a girl in his home.

George Pedeman of 95 Washington st., Malden. Crash of Elevated car into Malden school yard, injuring eight persons.

(Withold name). Story on Nashua fire.

Daniel Falvey of 953 Albany st., Boston. Five hurt in auto crash at Rawson st. and Dorchester ave., South Boston

O. A. Robertson of 1465 Dorchester ave., Dorchester. Assistance on same story.

(Name withheld). Fire in Sears st., Burlington.

There is more opportunity this week to make extra money for yourself in accordance with the news tip notice printed elsewhere in this newspaper.

AD CLUB HOLDS FETE TONIGHT

The Advertising Club of Boston will hold its 26th annual dinner dance tonight in the Salle Moderne of the Hotel Statler, at which time results of this afternoon's balloting for new officers will be announced.

More than 300 reservations for club members and guests have been made, and the guests will be entertained by many stage and radio stars, including Helen Barr, Sandy McFarlane, Bob Emery and Morey Pearl and orchestra.

It was announced today that 150 special prizes will be given out at the party, expected to be the most successful affair the club has ever staged.

ESCALATOR FOR FOREST HILLS HIT, PRAISED

Hearing Before Public Utilities Commission Attended by Friends and Foes

Plans of the Elevated trustees for substitution of two single file escalators for the double capacity carriers at Forest Hills station were supported and condemned at a hearing today before the Public Utilities Commission.

Former Councillor James A. (Jerry) Watson contended the district wants the present escalator repaired and a second double carrier installed. No one in the district, he said, wants the single file one.

Thomas B. Fitzpatrick, president of the Roslindale Board of Trade, said his organization voted to support the single file escalator plan, provided car riders would not be inconvenienced.

City Councillor Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park argued that the only "disadvantage" the change would present would be prevention of "sprinters from running to the top platform."

On behalf of 3000 Forest Hills residents, John P. Dolan offered no objection to the change.

Winchester Home Funds Transferred

Transfer of the remaining funds of the Winchester Home for Aged Women was authorized today by Judge Edward B. Pierce of the Superior Court who directed removal of the fund, $130,000, to the Bo ton Home for Aged Women.

The Boston organization will care for the inmates of the Winchester home which was crippled by the larceny of $330,000 in trust funds by Henry G. Wiley, former treasurer, now serving a State prison sentence.

Your car painted like new for $3!
3 million car owners say "YES"!

IF YOU saw a shop sign offering to paint your car like a factory finish for $3, you'd grab the opportunity to have a new looking car again at such little cost.

So quick and easy!

Especially when you knew that new paint could also add $40 or $100 to your car's trade-in value.

$3 and you can make your car new with Steelcote—not an amateur job but an expert's finish—without a sign of brush mark or streak. It dries with a smooth, brilliant finish like baked enamel. One coat is usually enough and no varnish is needed.

And it's so quick and easy. You use it right over old lacquer, paint or any finish your car has. Hardly an hour's work. It dries over night. You can paint your car today and drive it tomorrow. Most durable finish of all.

Because it is made of an elastic base, it won't crack, peel or chip off. In all car colors. See a Steelcote dealer today.

SHOT HIMSELF

A DRAMATIC SUICIDE

For a time Montgomery lived in the apartment where Pauline Clark was a dramatic suicide in 1922. This was at 282 Newbury st. Montgomery was a fatalist. His favorite topic was fatalism. He believed in predestination. He insisted that his destiny was predecreed for him. Continually, Montgomery would tell his friends that he had lived in the apartment in which Pauline Clark had ended her life. He would tell the details of her death.

THEY KNEW ILL-FATED YOUTH

Two friends of the dead club man. Lieut. Charles C. Wood, U. S. N., now stationed at the Radio School at Harvard, tells of a longing that Montgomery had to enter the ministry. Together with Lieut. Wood, Miss Charlot Childress (shown above) and Wood were often in the company of Montgomery and they both considered him a very good friend.

LANE ASSAILS GOODWIN

equipped with modern plumbing Paul Revere, at a cost of $11,000; Dillaway, $7000; Warren, $10,000; Albert Palmer, $8000; Frothingham, $11,000; Lowell, $10,000; Hull, $4500; Clinch, $5500, Ould Gibson, $5500; Bancroft, $8000; William Kent, $7000, and Thomas Dwight, $4500

In reply to the statement of Mr. Goodwin, attacking him, Mr. Lane said

"After reading the statement made by Mr. Goodwin, I really feel it is a waste of time to keep answering the different installments he issues.

"This department stated to the Legislature this spring that if the Legislature would give the school committee the funds they asked, we could save some money on alterations and repairs; because the school committee program was to build several new school buildings to replace old ones which should have been abandoned years ago.

"If we should build new buildings anybody but Mr. Goodwin could see that the money expended for repairs could be reduced.

"I was on the school committee from 1918 to 1925, and during those years we had to fight men like Mr. Goodwin to get money to build school buildings. The Legislature during those years was very fair to the school committee, and the people of Boston responded in raising the money to build schools.

PEOPLE RESPONDED

"During the years I was on the school committee, the old schoolhouse commission was entirely under the control of the mayor. On Jan. 1, 1930, when the department of school buildings was established under the new order, study was given to protection in case of fire and to sanitary conditions.

"From 1926 to 1930 only one building had fire escapes added to it. Last year five buildings were equipped with fire escapes, and a program is ready to carry the work on during this year to a fairly large extent.

"The same is true of the sanitary conditions of the schools. The following is a list of alterations as to sanitation in the schools in recent years

"As sanitation in 1924-25; one building; in 1916-17-18-28; two buildings in 1918-26; three buildings in 1926-22-23-25-27; five buildings in 1921.

"During 1930, old sanitation was remodeled by this department in eight schools, costing over $57,000, and a large program is ready to have changes made this year, when the children leave schools for the summer vacation.

GOODWIN RAPPED

"Everyone in Boston, except Mr. Goodwin, seems to appreciate that this department is functioning, and his antipathy is entirely a personal one; and it serves no useful purpose to engage in debate with him because he keeps rehashing the same old story, day in and day out.

"His assertion that when I was chairman of the Boston school committee we built high schools, filling them with expensive machinery, rifle ranges and swimming pools is too absurd to answer. There was no such building when I was on the school committee. We did advocate cooperation with the library department to plan for branch libraries in one of two school buildings and I hope Mr. Goodwin does not object to libraries.

"The only swimming pool I know of is the unused one in Memorial High school. I was always opposed to swimming pools in the schools of Boston as we have so many swimming facilities at above places. After I left the school committee a swimming pool was planned for Memorial High school, but I had nothing to do with it.

"When I was on the board the boys got their rifle practice entirely outside of school buildings. I believe they did put a rifle range in Brighton High school but that was put in long after I left the school committee."

In connection with the Boston Evening American's more-and-better school campaign, Superintendent of School House Construction Louis K. Rourke, announced that $4,000 will be spent to equip six schools with fire escapes this summer and that $75,000 more will be spent next year to add fire escapes to nine other schools

BULLET TAKES OUT BOY'S EYE

The boy playing in his dooryard in Washington st., found the cartridge and hammered it on a rock It exploded, and the bullet passed through his right eyeball and through the tip of his right ear.

His mother, Mrs. William Gay, told police her two other children, John, 10, and Dorothy, 11, found 37 other bullets in the yard a few days ago and brought them to her.

DERBY 'WINNER' SEES POLICE

Isaac Freedman, West End tailor who complained to police that he was flimflocked out of the greater part of his winnings in a Kentucky Derby sweepstake, today was closeted at police headquarters with Deputy Supt. McDevitt, in charge of the police drive against lotteries in Boston.

The drive against the lottery racket started after it was learned that Freedman had been mulcted of $3300 of a $35,000 winning ticket on the Derby.

Various pools have been running here for years with police making only "pulsatory" efforts to check them. It is believed that more than 30,000,000 tickets are being sold in Boston and throughout New England every week.

It was learned that Friedman, 63, of North Russell st., had purchased a Derby ticket distributed by the organization which operates the Leader clearing house pool. Freedman drew Twenty Grand, the Derby winner, on his ticket, which would entitle him to the top prize of $35,000.

He was visited by two men, now believed to be agents of the pool on the eve of the race and offered $6000 for his ticket

He refused but was informed he would take that or nothing so finally accepted the $6000

THE SUNKEN PLAY YARD

Besides the urgent necessity of erecting adequate fire escapes on the Cyrus Alger School, in South Boston, other delinquencies have been reported by the investigators for the Boston Finance Commission. For instance, you can see at a glance in the picture above how far below the street level is the school yard of the 7th st. school. The condition of the iron fence, gates and the base in which they are placed, has been set forth in the report as being dangerous to boys and girls during play hours. At

MAKE-BELIEVE

By FAITH BALDWIN

Mary Lou Callson Delight

By FAITH BALDWIN

PERHAPS DELIGHT HARFORD had remarried. Mary Lou hadn't that occurred to Mrs. Lorrimer. It was quite possible that she had done so. She should be given an opportunity, if that were the case, to legalise that marriage, made in all good faith. Of if she hadn't married, if her heart still remembered Lorrimer, she should be granted the opportunity to prove her heart, to make its memory reality.

This matter lay, as Mary Lou saw it, between Lorrimer and Delight Harford.

If, somehow, she could go away knowing that things had been cleared up between them, that, for better or worse, they had met, had come to some understanding, she would go away, if not happier, at least more content with the role she had played.

Before she slept, in that golden dawn, she had made up her mind to go to New York, and see Delight Harford for herself, to tell her the truth, to put it up to her, to leave it in her hands. Mrs. Lorrimer would cast her out, that she was convinced of; but even that didn't matter. Nothing mattered but Lorrimer and his happiness and the ultimate reaching of the truth, the eventual, absolute honesty which must prevail between all of them in this situation, were anything good to come out of chaos.

Two days later Mary Lou went to New York—alone.

On the train out of Westmill Mary Lou sat looking blindly out of the window, her hart a small, human battlefield. At each stop she was inclined to get out and wait for a train which would take her back. She had been mad to come! Mrs. Lorrimer would never forgive her. It was not, after all, her affair. But it was her affair. She was as much involved as anyone else and, loving Lorrimer as she did, his happiness was so important to her that she must risk Margaret's displeasure and see this thing through.

When Larry had told her about meeting Delight Harford she had happened to mention the address at which she lived, or rather, the name of the hotel. At Grand Central, Mary Lou went into a telephone booth and looked up the hotel. She called the number, asked for Miss Harford, was greeted by blank ignorance on the part of the hotel telephone girl, and then, remembering, asked for Miss Hackett—Diana Hackett.

She stood there in the stuffy booth with the distant noises of trains pulling out and in, in her ears, with people hurrying by, with the clatter of the subway turnstiles not far off, and waited for Diana to answer. The palm of her hands were wet and cold. She was trembling a little.

Lorrimer had left early that morning for the flying field Mrs. Lorrimer had estate matters to attend to before noon and for the afternoon had been persuaded to go to a bridge party at the Wynnes. Jenny was in town, visiting a cousin, staying for a week or so, in order to buy clothes, having left for New York that morning. While Jenny was in Manhattan, Larry would be well occupied, at breakfast with Margaret, Lorrimer having breakfasted early and alone, Mary Lou had said that she must go to town and out to see Billy. She hadn't seen him in several weeks, and a letter had just come from India which, when she answered, she wished to answer from first-hand knowledge.

But she was not planning to go straight to Oakdale. She had an errand to do, first, upon the subject of which she was mute.

"What?" asked Diana Hackett, in the receiver.

Mary Lou's nerves steadied. She spoke her own name, told the rather indifferent listener on the other end of the wire that she was a friend of Larry Mitchell's and wanted to see her as soon as possible on a matter of great importance. Could she come to the hotel now? Yes, she was nearby—at Grand Central, in fact.

"It really is important," she said, "to you, Miss Hackett."

"Come along then," answered Diana.

"Will we be alone?"

"More or less," the other woman answered.

Mary Lou went out of the booth presently and took a taxi to the hotel. Ten minutes later the door of an apartment was opened to her.

"The other girls are asleep," said Delight Harford, "we can sit here in the living room."

CHAPTER 32.

Delight was not fully dressed. She was wearing a negligee which had once been quite lovely, but which now was soiled and torn. She had high-heeled mules on bare feet and her hennaed thick hair was in early-morning, just-out-of-bed disorder. Her blue eyes were heavy with weariness and her face haggard. But her fine skin was radiant and she smiled at the younger girl with spontaneous friendliness. She wiped the look of her somehow—of whom did she remind her?

"I feel I've gotten you up," said Mary Lou.

She looked with a sort of inner despair at the other woman.

PLANS FOR DEB TEA GIFT

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—I have received an invitation to a debutante tea. Will you please advise me if it is necessary to send flowers or a gift. I am in no way related to the debutante. If one is obliged to send flowers, what kind of flowers and type of bouquet would you suggest?

2—You might tell me about dress and so forth. Would it be proper to wear a dress with sleeves above the elbow. If one wears a dress of this style, what length gloves should one wear?

MISS G.

1—It is customary to send flowers for a debutante tea, flowers that most always give youth and brightness, flowers that will most gracefully take their place as part of the decorative background for the debutante.

If you wish to send a corsage, gardenias are effective flowers to choose. Or a prim bouquet fashioned of rows and rows of delightful posies gathered about a central flower, such as a yellow rose or several white flowers.

2—Wear your dressiest afternoon clothes. An ensemble is always appropriate. If you wear a dress of the kind you suggest, wear gloves that is near as possible meet the sleeves.

Paris Picks Black for Coats

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, May 19—After we have culled a favorite color from the general range afforded us this season, we send out a call for black. Especially is this so when it comes to coats. It would seem that we have all indulged our desire for a colored coat during the early days of spring and now we are demanding coats of black.

For there is a dash and élan to the smartly cut black coat that no brightly hued garment can muster. And for the more formal occasion, the black coat is certainly persona grata at the court of fashion.

A favored material for the dark wrap seems to be crepe marocain. It has a rich and distinguished look about it and does not need much ornamentation to make it attractive. This material has been much used for dresses and suits, despite the claims of all sorts of new weaves that bid in waves on the sartorial shore each season. The new coats are skillfully cut and display many a clever little unexpected touches to add to their charm.

Very smart, indeed, is the ensemble by Heim. The coat is a three-quarter sleeved model of black silk marocain and has a shallow cape. The frock is of printed crepe de chine in white on a white ground. The frock is very simple in cut with a scarf tie at the neck a narrow belt and diagonal lines in the skirt. The two upper tiers are considerably more shallow then the lowest one and all are circular.

TRUTH ROUTS GHOSTS OF DOUBT

By WINIFRED BLACK.

LAST NIGHT, in the deep night, I heard them near me. The strange, secret, mysterious foot steps.

Winifred Black

Quick and light, at the foot of the stairs, slower as they came nearer the top. Slower, more deliberate, slower, and then, all at once—no more.

A dozen times I have gone to the head of the only staircase in my house and listened—no, the footsteps were not mounting there.

But when I went back into my room again, there they were, step by step, beginning fast, slowing, slowing, slowing.

Did I imagine them—the footsteps?

What happens to people who imagine such things as that?

Sometimes they would pass and I did not hear the steps.

Last night there was a round moon of silver in the sky, the distant water sparkled with a path of glory, and the night air was heavy with the fragrance of lilacs, purple and white, newly come to bloom.

Step—step—step—there it was, the lagging footsteps mounting the hidden stairs.

In the morning I told the breakfast table about it.

I tried to laugh, but I'm afraid my laughter was a sickly imitation of mirth.

One of the people did laugh—it was a man, young and lighthearted.

"Put on your hat," he said after breakfast, "and come with me. I want to show you something that will interest you."

And I put on my hat and followed the young man down to a little back street almost like an alley.

"Do you see that high door in the wall there?" said the young man who had laughed at my story of the mysterious footsteps. "Come, I will open that door."

"Stand here," he said, "and listen."

And the young man opened the door in the wall, and tramp—tramp—the steps began again.

I looked into the opened doorway, and there was a flight of steps leading from the little narrow street up and up, to the courtyard of—not my house.

The mystery was explained.

How simple it all was—like all the other mysteries that puzzle us so.

The ghosts of terror and apprehension all dowdied that haunt us—why there's nothing at all but somebody of plain flesh and blood coming up a pair of very ordinary stairs.

I'm glad I told the breakfast table about my folly.

'Rheumatism' Covered Multitude of Ills

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

WE HEAR little these days about "old-fashioned rheumatism. The disease has not disappeared, however, but the name has changed.

Dr. Copeland

"Rheumatism" was a term that covered a multitude of ailments. Regardless of what rheumatism may really be, if there was any pain in a joint, it was spoken of as rheumatism.

There were as many patent medicines sold for this ailment for this ailment as there are planets in the solar system. Grandmother had her own pet liniment, "a sure cure for rheumatism." In her goodness of heart she was always anxious for every sufferer to try it.

It is the effort of modern medicine to be accurate. Accuracy is important, not only in the treatment of disease, but in the description of diseases. Diseases can be adequately deal with only when properly understood.

The term "rheumatism" has been placed in the background because more accurate descriptive terms have been found. Though the effects of the complaints and particularly the pain are identical, it is now customary to speak of joint pains as "arthritis."

Likewise we have special types of arthritis, as "atrophic," or "hypertrophic arthritis" and "rheumatoid arthritis." True rheumatism with involvement of the joints, as spoken of as "rheumatic fever," although it may be associated with true arthritis.

All this may seem unnecessary and unimportant. However, it is quite important for the physician to know whether he is dealing with atrophic or hypertrophic arthritis and as to whether or not there is true rheumatic involvement.

Recourse to the X-ray, examination of the blood and urine, in addition to a study of the symptoms of the sufferer, are needed to determine accurately the nature of the disease. The accuracy is of vital importance for the future welfare of the patient.

Answers To Health Queries

V. D. L. Q.—How much should a girl of 17, 5 feet 2 inches tall, weigh? 2—What do you advise for constipation?

A—She should weigh about 115 pounds. This is about the average weight for one of this age and height, as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is of little or no significance. 2—Eat simple, well-cooked food. Avoid foods unduly rich in fats and starches, drink plenty of water. Eat plenty of fresh green vegetables, fresh and stewed fruit. Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for full particulars and repeat your question.

W. L. Q.—What do you advise for halitosis?

A—First eliminate the cause, which may be constipation, indigestion, nasal catarrh or decayed teeth.

Don't Quit, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a woman of 27, and have a little boy of 4, who is a great care to me. He needs the attention of both parents all the time, but gets precious little care from his father. My in-laws say I'm jealous of my husband, but he did me a great wrong in going with another woman at one time, and I can't trust him or forget that. He never takes me out with him but always goes alone, and I surely get lonesome in the evenings. He would like to have him a good pal.

I have been separated from him a number of times, always taking the child with me. If you ever saw my little boy you would understand that I could not take him with me if I intend to earn my own living. I have decided at last to have home and let my husband care for the child, but it would worry me to death if I thought he was not well cared for. Please give me some advice. I certainly need it.

PRISCILLA.

Dear Priscilla: You have not been frank enough in your letter for me to give you any very substantial advice, I'm afraid. Your little boy undoubtedly needs a mother's care more than he does a father's. Why not try, in the interests of this child, to compose the difficulties with your husband? Try and forget about the other woman, as that seems to be over and past.

Uses Too Much Rouge

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 32 years old and fell in love with a widow a couple of years older who is employed in the same business concern I am. Since our engagement she has begun to use about twice as much make-up as she used before. This makes her look a good deal older and gives her a hard expression. I am becoming disillusioned and fear I do not care as much about her as I thought I did in the beginning. Would you advise me to ask her to use less make-up?

JIM.

Dear Jim: I think you might very tactfully speak to your fiancee that old reliable one about "beauty unadorned the most." And tell her that her complexion needs no such embellishing. A great many women, no longer in their first youth, make this sad mistake.

Beauty Box

SKIMPING on food is no economy, yet plenty of girls do it, or they are ruining the luxuries of dress. You can't keep the old engines going without fuel. The amount of food necessary depends upon the amount of energy expended, but even the lazy little girl needs 1500 calories a day. The diet should be balanced. It should include meat, eggs, cereals, green salads, vegetables and fruit. The greater the variety of dishes the better. Finicky eaters who live mainly on bread, meat and potatoes do themselves an injustice.

PROPER WAY TO COOK EGGS

By MARTHA LEE.

"MY HUSBAND will eat soft boiled eggs every day in the year," triumphantly announces Mrs. Newlywed.

"Mine will, too—if they're soft cooked and not 'soft boiled'" boomed a more experienced housewife—and then the battle was on!

Martha Lee

There's no doubt that eggs are sensitive to heat in cooking and it's easy to overcook them and overcooking makes them indigestible. A famous children's specialist told me that no child should eat an egg that is actually boiled.

He said that you should bring a deep small saucepan of water to a boil, drop in the eggs, cover the pan and remove it instantly from the stove. At the end of 6 minutes, your egg is cooked to perfection, with the white a digestible opaque jelly, rather than a tough, indigestible for the yolk.

Perfect poached eggs are really a joy, and a little care in their preparation is well worth while. A perfectly round poached egg on a round piece of toast is so much more attractive than one sprawling over a toast recipe angles with perhaps scorched edges. To make a perfectly round poached egg it's necessary to use a muffin ring or special egg pan. Fill your frying pan two-thirds full of boiling salted water, place the muffin rings in and then drop an egg in each ring.

Be sure that the water does not boil. The egg should simmer just below the boiling point until perfectly set. Some of the hot water poured over the yolks with a spoon will give them an attractive film. Then they may be lifted, muffin rings and all, onto beautifully browned rounds of toast, which, for a change, may be covered with minced ham or deviled ham. Or the egg may be topped with a cheese or tomato sauce, or a little hollandaise.

Even fried eggs, so often poorly cooked, can be tender and tempting. Use only enough fat or butter to cover the bottom of the pan, with a very little extra for basting the eggs. The fat should be hot but not smoking and the eggs should be broken onto a saucer and slipped one at a time into the pan so that they do not touch each other. They should cook very slowly, covered, and baste them occasionally with some of the fat in the pan.

Yours Faithfully

Martha Lee

P. S. Have you sent your banana recipes to compete for the $100 cash prize contest? No reason why you shouldn't have your share. And remember, you can send one or one hundred of your favorite ways of preparing bananas. Only on one side of the paper—please. Send them to Miss Banana Contest Editor, care of Martha Lee, Boston American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston. Contest closes June 1.

Please Answer

"I HAVE a kitten that is tormented with fleas. Can any one tell me a harmless way to kill them?"—Mrs. D. W., of Allston.

Recipes of Round

$10 AWARDS of $1 each will be published each Saturday for the best contributions chosen from this column during the week. The household suggestions sent include not only recipes, but any sort of helpful hints for housewives—economical cookery or housekeeping in any of its forms.

Address all contributions to Martha Lee, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

CHOCOLATE CAKE

2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
1 cup flour
1 cup sugar
1-3 cup Melted butter
1 dessertspoon baking powder
½ tsp. vanilla
½ tsp. salt

Break 2 eggs in a cup and fill up cup with milk. Sift flour and baking powder and salt and add all the rest of the ingredients and beat well. Put in greased pan in an oven for 20 to 40 minutes, 350 deg. F., and you will have a delicious cake.—Mrs. J. E. Coleman, 33 Circuit st., Melrose.

Household Hint

THE DISPOSAL of safety razor blades where they are safe from the fingers of four little tots has been provided for in an easy manner. We take a small tin box, make a slit in the top and then tack the box to the bathroom wall, close to the mirror, when the daily shaving is performed. The tack is put low enough so that one may put the cover on the box. When this box is full, it is put out for disposal with the other tin cans.—L. Morze, 83 Cottage st., W. Lynn.

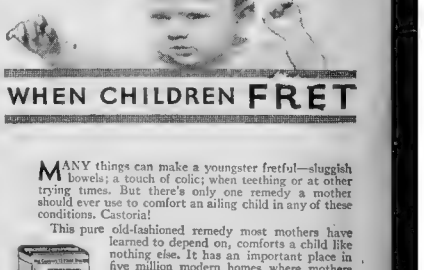
Answer to Request

FOR MRS. A. M. E., of Stoughton.

This may help solve your problem. Try and melt some red fruit jelly and pour over the tarts; then place in a cool place to harden. It will be a pretty and lasting glaze. Why not use red currant jelly with strawberry tarts, and one of the light apple jellies for an apricot tart, etc? Tarts that I have made have at times been prepared with meringue. —Mrs. Ina Potter, 21 Carmel st., Chelsea.

Garden Girl Says

"JUST AS soon as the weather is more settled, better get your dahlia bulbs in. The earlier you plant them, the longer they'll flower. And don't forget, they need a lot of water."



WHEN CHILDREN FRET

MANY things can make a youngster fretful—sluggish bowels; a touch of colic; when teething or at other trying times. But there's only one remedy a mother should ever use to comfort an ailing child in any of these conditions. Castoria!

This pure old-fashioned remedy most mothers have learned to depend on, comforts a child like nothing else. It has an important place in five million modern homes where mothers keep it always on hand, so they will be ready to render first aid when a child is ailing.

Watch your child's tongue; when it is coated, or whenever the breath is tainted, let this pure vegetable preparation come to the aid of that sour stomach or clogged bowels.

The beauty of Castoria is that it can be given as often as needed. It contains no harmful ingredients. The recipe on the wrapper tells you how mild and bland it is. It is a children's remedy, made especially for the children. Ideal for infants—yet effective in larger doses for a child in his teens.

Genuine Fletcher's Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

COMBINES LIFE INSURANCE AND INVESTMENT

By FRANK H. McLOON.

One new corporation seeks favor with the buying public by uniting the investment trust idea with life insurance. This is a unique addition to security offerings with its "protection as you save" appeal. Most of the states have laws requiring life insurance companies to fulfill certain requirements before being allowed to transact business and these will doubtless have to be met by the new "security."

John Moody, investment service leader, in frank regarding the would-be prophets of the present in an article—

"Practically every forecast made by undoubted authorities during the last few months has gone entirely wrong."

Dr. Moody then proceeds to predict in line with—the forecast made in the Boston Evening American's annual financial review number at the start of the current year, that is, a slow return to normal times. We are in no mood for prophesying, but just using common sense.

While thousands of corporations are incorporated in New England, comparatively few of those listed on the New York Stock Exchange claim official residence here. The barrier to corporate relationship with this section is not infrequently to be found in law not uncritized.

The Pine Tree State used to be the Mecca of new corporation charters, and a teeming little town of Kittery, Me., when the late Horace Mitchell was in his prime was a veritable beehive of activity. It was the meeting place of some legal corporations. From this office you could drive to the shipyards where was built the Kearsarge which sank the Confederate raider Alabama, but the corporate engagement of the Civil War.

Maine still attracts. The Yellow Truck & Coach Mfg Co., General Motors subsidiary, building the option of Maine constructing, long distance buses, held its annual meeting at Portland last week and listened to the shipping where was built the Kearsarge which sank the Confederate raider Alabama, but the corporate engagement of the Civil War.

Maine still attracts. The Yellow Truck & Coach Mfg Co., General Motors subsidiary, building the option of Maine constructing, long distance buses, held its annual meeting at Portland last week and listened to the shipping largest coastwise shipping line holds its annual meetings at Eliot Me., for Frederick Donnell Jones built the Rangeley fine war ship to fly Old Glory.

Study sent us by a leading American economical service states:

"The average wage, without board, received by farm labor in the United States at the present time is $3.36, as compared with $2.43 in the middle of 1929. Farm wages have thus been reduced 28% per cent since the beginning of the business recession. This reduction in wages has been made necessary by a 55 per cent drop in the prices of farm products. The widely advocated wage maintenance policy has thus been a flat failure in the agricultural division of labor."

We do not know from what source compilations of farm labor wages are secured. We are ordinarily skeptical about the accuracy of such compilations until we are convinced of their correctness. We know of no capable farm labor that can be had at $1.80 a day. As a matter of fact, most farm labor, as we find it, is not hired on a daily wage basis in New England meals and room usually figure in the contract.

The price now paid the "hands behind the plow" in New England in districts of which we have personal knowledge, is $2.50 a day.

NEW HIGHS ARE RECORDED FOR 'L' SHARES

Boston Elevated shares moved into new high territory in dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange while the remainder of the list worked to new low levels. Common and first preferred Elevated issues were at new highs. Fractional gains were shown for the preferred and second preferred.

Shares recording new 1937 lows included Atchison, American Telephone American British preferred, Kreuger & Toll, Mergenthaler, New England Public Service, New Haven, S. D. Warren, United Founders and Warren Brothers.

Point gains were shown for General Capital, New England Telephone and Penn R. R. Union Twist Drill slumped nearly 4 points. Atlantic Edison, Anaconda, Quincy Mining and United Fruit moved in a narrow range.

MIXED PRICE CHANGES SEEN IN WALL ST.

New York, May 19. The stock market in Wall st was subjected to fresh waves of selling today, but bears became wary, and flurries of short covering caused mixed price trends at the finish.

Pivotal shares generally closed with slight advances, although there were several weak spots at the finish.

RAILS' GAINS CUT.

Rails were a strong group in the morning, but lost most of their gains during a wave of selling during the afternoon. Trading was active during the first hour, but diminished in volume thereafter and the day's turnover approximated 2,000,000 shares, 300,000 over yesterday's.

U. S. Steel sold up 1¼ points during the morning, declined to a new low at 97, off two points net, during the afternoon, then rallied to finish at a fraction below yesterday.

American Can, however closed 2 points higher, and shares ended the day with advances of from fractions to a point included American Telephone, General Electric, Westinghouse, North American, Standard of N. J., du Pont, and New York Central.

Case was a weak feature dropping 6 points. Woolworth lost 1¾, and Corn Products and Loew, 1 each, and Myers F. J. Eastman, nearly 4 lower. In the mot on p tures, Fox Paramount and Wa ner all lost a point or more.

CREDIT CHEAPENED.

Further cheapening of credit with consequent new high levels in U. S. government securities, and continued demand for highest grade bonds were among the day's notable developments.

The reduction in the rate of interest which New York banks pay on commercial deposits and deposits of other banks from 1 to ½ of 1 per cent was considered one of most important developments in the money program since the cut in the New York Federal Reserve rediscount rate from 2 to 1½ per cent two weeks ago.

Call money, renewed at 1½ per cent, but bankers would not be surprised to see it stabilize at 1 per cent.

Reduction of Texas Corp's quarterly dividend from 75 to 50 cents was a blow to the deep-dyed pessimists even of the oil controls, and would not have been surprised at an announcement. The stock quickly responded in short covering.

The weekly petroleum statistics according to preliminary figures will show a large drop in crude output for the second successive week. Selling of the chain store and tobacco issues was regarded as a further response to the upbuilding of the Indiana chain store tax law and the Reynolds cigarette price cutting.

Wall Street was still busy with gossip concerning selling in this market from London. Various rumors have been circulated, which have been branded as absurd in responsible quarte s.

U. S. BONDS AT NEW HIGHS

New York, May 19 (AP). Four issues of bonds of the United States government sold at the highest prices since their issuance today and two other government issues reached their highest prices of this year.

The fourth liberty loan 4¼s above $1060, and the several issues of treasury 3 s ranging from $1032 to $1034 sold at the new top time high records and the treasury 4s and 4¼s at $1093 and $1138, respectively, reached their highest levels of 1931. These prices are for bonds of $1000 par value each.

An advance in the bond market is one of the principal objectives of the lower interest rate policy of the Federal Reserve Bank, it is acknowledged, unofficially. The theory is that, if interest rates are low enough, surplus funds will be forced into the bond market.

Second grade bonds also rallied as set, to follow the high grade issues upward.

Pan-American Has Increased Profits

Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co. (subsidiary of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana) reports today for year ended Dec. 31 net of $18,743,824 after interest, depreciation, depletion, federal taxes, minority interests, etc., equivalent to $4.02 a share (par $50) on 2,418,048 combined common and common B shares outstanding at end of year. This compares with $8,825,892 or $2.92 a share on 3,300,598 combin i shares at end of 1929.

Cotton Lower in New York Closing

New York, May 19. Cotton futures today closed 7 to 13 points lower. May 9.94, July 9.94@9.95, October 9.84, December 9.84; January 9.75; March 9.22-23. Spot quiet, middling 9.10.

Jones & Laughlin Get Large Order

Pittsburgh, May 19. Sun Pipe Line Co. has placed an order for 17,000 tons of 10-inch steel pipe with Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp for a line from Beaumont, Texas, to the East Texas oil fields.

Grains Are Higher in Chicago Market

Chicago, May 19.—Grains closed higher today. Wheat finished ¾ to 1¼c up, corn ¼ to 1½c higher, and oats ¼ to 5c up. Rye closed ¼ to 1c higher.

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Loughran Conscious. Knows Whereabouts. He Craves Spanking. | How Jack Gave It. Another Dad Wins. Maje Loses Stars.

A MATCH FOR MALONEY-SCHAAF VICTOR

"A lucky punch," says Loughran. Sure it was—for Jack! He bagged a Hundred Grand, bounced Thomas on his back. The punch was such a polthogue, in Phillie they say that Tom has just discovered where in hek he's at!

TOMMY LOUGHRAN must have located himself. The last time he fought our Mister Sharkey the bout ended with Sir Tommy groping blindly for the ropes and inquisitively inquiring of the referee, "Where am I at?" Tom didn't know whether he was in the ring or over in the next county. He even forgot his English and spoke in a way that made the erudite Mister Tunney swoon. He has discovered his whereabouts enough now to clarion to the populace that he is desirous of engaging in another tete-a-tete with the Squire of Chestnut Hill.

Says no matter how clever a fighter is once in a while he is sure to run into a lucky punch. "The wallop I ran into when I fought Sharkey was a lucky punch," says Tom. Sure it was, Tom. Lucky for Sharkey. But not for you. Remember those two "bumps" on your cranium? One was as big as a goose egg. They made some of us think Jack must have had a horse-shoe in his glove.

LOUGHRAN.

WE HAVE a hunch that when Tommy Loughran says he wants to fight Sharkey again he is talking for publicity, touting the ballyhoo trumpet. Tommy is a lucky young man with plenty of gray matter under his Kelly. He knows his fistic onions. No one knows better than Tommy that Sharkey can box just as well as he can, can wallop five times as hard, has more beef and bone and is much stronger. Of course, the loser's end in a match with Sharkey might be much bigger than the winner's share in some of these other flatz jobs Loughran hires out for. That's the only reason we can see why the debonair Philadelphian wants another licking from Sharkey.

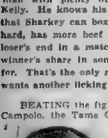
BEATING the fight rusty, clumsy and still green and inexperienced Campolo, the Tame Calf of the Pampas, is one thing. Beating fast, clever, sharp and hard-hitting Jack Sharkey is another. Tommy is fully conversant with that. Sharkey has your number, Tom. If he can't beat you one way, he can another. Know how he wafted you into the Valley of Forgetfulness the last time, Tommy? Here's a little inside stuff –

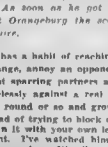


JACK SHARKEY.

One sunny afternoon down at Harvey's Lake when you were training for the Sharkey debacle a Sharkey scout dropped in to look you over. He walked right in, turned around and walked right out again. Saw you box just two rounds. "I've seen all I want to see," he confided. He hopped a taxi back to Wilkes-Barre and boarded the train for Orangeburg, via New York. As soon as he got to Gus Wilson's place at Orangeburg the scout reported to the Squire.

"It's all over, Jack," he said. "Tommy has a habit of reaching, feeling and pawing with his left to get the range, annoy an opponent and prod him off balance. That's great against sparring partners and seconds-raiters, but he can't paw away so carelessly against a real fighter Let him prod you on the schnozzola for a round or so and grow a bit careless, Jack. Then all of a sudden, instead of trying to block or duck that tantalizing left, knock it down and pin it with your own left. Do that and he'll be wide open for your right. I've watched him and I know. Just pin his left and you'll get that opening. It's all you need.'

It was. Swish! Pop! Flop! The Sailorman's right knocked Tommy's compass over the ring ropes. The wind of the punch blew Tommy's chart out of the ball park. Tom didn't know whether he was in China, County Mayo or Timbuctoo. "Mister Referee, where am I at?" queried the bewildered Tommy. That final "at" made Gene Tunney think for the smelling salts. Such flagrant abuse of the King's English was shameful, positively and absolutely shameful, would Mister Tunney. Terrible! Terrible!



SCHAAF.

BUT TOMMY if you insist on getting another Sharkey spanking, how about qualifying for it according to Hoyle. Sharkey has a young stablemate and protege yclept Ernie Schaaf. Believe you have met him before, Mister Loughran. Ernie is going to meet our Shamus Maloney of the well known South Boston Maloneys in the Boston Garden one week from tonight. Now why not meet the winner of that match for the right to get another licking from the Shrinking Violet? If you whip the winner of the Maloney-Schaaf encounter few of us will have any objections to you getting another chastising from Sharkey—seeing that you insist upon it.

We note that another gun with a big family has made good in a contest calling for phenomenal stamina and endurance . . . Jimmy Henigan won the Boston Marathon for his five offspring and now "Pop" Clark, likewise pappy of five, comes along and captures the national championship 50,000-meter walk . . . To raise a family these days one must have stamina and endurance, take it from the proud and perspiring dad of seven . . . But Glory Be, we wish we had seven times seven, Lord love 'em . . . Ma, Pinkie and Dan, you too. By the time he gets five like Henigan and Clark Clarence may get good again.

CAVANAUGH.

JUNE isn't going to be a happy month for your old friend, Maj. Frank Cavanaugh . . . The old Maje loses almost his whole herd of Fordham Rams by graduation . . . Leslie "Barney" Barnard of the Boons office is all steamed up over his new 35-foot cruiser . . . George Grimm tells us Barney has threatened all of us with a good time . . . Canadians say professional lacrosse will get better than hockey on this side of the border . . . Not in the baseball season, Alphonse . . . Golfers want to go back to the old ball . . . So, do we . . . High ones . . . P'son omitted.

Frank Reynolds, former graduate manager of athletics at B. C., now heads a foreign and American travel service and wants to take everyone for a ride . . . Kerch-o-o-o? Open-air boxing bouts are all right in the good old summer time, but not this season o' the year . . . Kerch-o-o—and a couple of cough drops' . . . Add Joe Vosnik to the busted phenome . . . The April baseball sensation has been benched . . . They call Jack Sheehy captain of the All-Ireland Gaelic football team that soon will play in Boston the "Babe Ruth of Ireland' . . . But we'll betcha Jack can't swing a shillelah like the Babe!

GEORGE VOIGT ADVANCES IN BRITISH GOLF

Voigt was two up at the end of the first nine but Abercrombie sank an 18-foot putt to win the 10th and then took the next one to square the match as George drove into the bull rushes and conceded the hole.

Voigt came back to win the 12th when Abercrombie went into the rushes and failed to get out with [illegible] The New Yorker squared again on the 13th, as the American pitched over the green into the bush. [illegible]

Match Ended on 17th Green

Voigt won the 14th with a three to the Englishman's four and then found trouble the 15th on Fruit. George was in a shaky position at the 16th, when his tee shot was short with Abercrombie well on the green with his, but he chipped to within nine feet of the pin and Voigt was unable for a half, leaving him one up and two to go.

The match ended on the 17th green as George sank the long putt for a birdie four, to win the hole by a stroke.

Elimination of Fiddian Blow to British Hopes

Allan S Newey of Moseley eliminated Bernard Fiddian, adversary from Voigt's path in the upper half of the draw when he defeated Eric Fiddian, 2 up.

Fiddian won his two matches yesterday and was conceded the best British hope to stop the American short of the semi-finals.

Tolley, winner of the championship in 1920 and 1929 is the favorite in the lower bracket.

G. P. Sims, of the Royal Calcutta Club, eliminated R. B. Foster, an American business man residing in London 1 up in 20 holes, to reduce the American team to three.

John deForest, the rich young Knickerbein who toured the United States last winter in search of golf knowledge, won from Amcotts Wilson 5 and 4. He recently won the Surrey championships. When he came back from the other side De-Forest had 22 irons in his bag. He earned the local title of "A Man of Irons."

Voigt was left as the sole American in the tournament at the close of the third round today. Douglas Fiddian disposed of E. J. Hadden of Oakland, Cal., 1 up, in 21 holes, and F. M. Smith defeated J. H. Foreman of Mamaroneck, N. Y., at the 20th hole.

Paul Asbill, who entered from the Essex County Country Club of New Jersey, fell before A. S. Nall-Cain of the Royal and Ancient 4 and 3.

Robert Watts, who won the championship in 1926 when it was held here, defeated Ken Greig of St Louis 2 up.

F. J. Wilson of Oakland, Cal., eliminated the veteran American Joshua Crane of Brookline, Mass., in a second round match, 4 and 3. Both had drawn first-round byes.

Boston Evening American Baseball Album

JOHN THOMAS WINSETT.

Red Sox outfielder.

Born, McKenzie, Tenn., November 24, 1903.

Graduated from Bethel College in '29 and joined the Lake Charles club. Mobile purchased him and sold him to the Red Sox before the close of that season.

He went South with the Sox last year and was sent back to Mobile under option shortly after the season opened. He hit for .329 in 74 games for Mobile and was recalled by the Sox this year.

He has been used only as a pinch hitter to date. In his first appearance in that role, he produced a home run against the Yankees.

He is far from a finished fly chaser as yet, but his ability to hit has earned him a permanent berth with the club.

He is still a resident of McKenzie, Tenn.

BROTHERS UNDER THE SKIN

AL MELLO | KID SULLIVAN WARRIOR GETS HIS BONUS | LOU BROUILLARD

TURNESA'S 69 BREAKS RECORD

Leeds, Eng., May 19 (AP)—Joe Turnesa, American professional, today carded a 69 in the first qualifying round of the $5000 Leeds professional tournament, to take an early lead over the big field.

Turnesa's fine 69 was a record for the course. He turned the first nine in a regulation 36 but came home in 33. The old record was 70.

Turnesa said he felt he was vecimated and "fit for Carnoustie," where the British open will be played. Turnesa won the Leeds tournament last year.

Turnesa's fine display was in contrast to the play of the other three Americans in the tournament

Tony Manero and Horton Smith, who finished third in the $7200 Southport tournament last week, took 76s.

Willie Hunter a recent arrival from the United States, was badly off form and finished with an 84, virtually eliminating him from the tournament Hunter is here for the open and entered the Leeds tournament as a tune-up.

The Sun Never Sets on a Cricket Game

—By MYLES T. McSWEENEY—

Chirp! Chirp! Chirp!

The crickets are coming.

The cricket season will open in Greater Boston on Saturday.

Cricket is like a concert of a bagpiper's band. It's all different, but you can't tell when it's ended.

There are no junior cricket teams. The players would have passed the age limit before the last chukker, or whatever the last part of a cricket game is called.

Tony Geniawicz Out With Blood Poisoning

Tony Geniawicz, state schoolboy shotput champion, will be unable to compete in the meet between the combined teams of Lynn English and Lynn Classical against Tufts freshmen at Medford this afternoon.

The big boy was found to be suffering with an attack of blood poisoning in his right hand yesterday and will be out of competition for some time.

Jacopo in Eighth Place at Finish

York, Eng., May 19 (AP)—Marshall Field's derby candidate, Jacopo, second favorite for the Epsom Downs classic, was beaten eight lengths today in the Londesborough Plate by another derby candidate, Dr. Doolittle. The race was at one mile for a purse of $5000.

GRANT PERMIT FOR TITLE GO

Cleveland, May 19 (AP)—The official permit for the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling heavyweight championship fight in Cleveland's Municipal Stadium was issued by city officials today. If there is any cause for postponement of the bout on July 3, it will take place July 4, 5 or 7.

The promoters posted two bonds, one for $100,000 to guarantee the return of ticket money if the fight is not staged, and the other for $50,000 guaranteeing the stadium's rent and other fees.

Cleveland, May 19 (AP)—A neufoul rule, with possible reservations, will prevail when Max Schmeling defends his heavyweight championship against Young Stribling in Cleveland Stadium July 3.

Announcement that the title would not be decided on a foul was made by the Cleveland boxing commission yesterday. The commission, however, consulted promoting Jack Dempsey on that in the event a low blow forces the end of the bout, heavy cash penalties might be inflicted.

LOU'S CAREER DECIDED BY CHANCE

This is the second of a series of six articles in which Lou Brouillard, new lightweight welterweight and middleweight champion of New England by virtue of his win over Al Mello tells his life story to Paul Shannon, Boston Evening American sports writer.

By LOU BROUILLARD
(AS TOLD TO JACK CONWAY)

"Who is your ring idol?"

This question has been flung at me on numerous occasions since it attracted attention in the ranks of the professional boxers.

Most people have expected me to name Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey, Jack Sharkey, Jack Delaney or some other nationally prominent ring star.

My answer has always been:

"Rene Pelquin!"

My interviewers ask:

"Quit your kidding. I never even heard of Rene Pelquin."

Yet Rene was and still is my ring idol. To me he is [illegible]

I'll give you the answer. Rene comes from Dan'elson, Ct. He was battling in the 135-pound class [illegible] in the metropolis. [illegible] for week into the gym at night to see Rene punch the bag and skip rope. In those days I didn't know anything about Dempsey and Tunney. My world in Danielson, Ct., was a small one and it revolved around the fighting form of Rene Pelquin.

I failed as Rene punched his way to close quarters and riddled his rivals with left arcd right-hand punches to the head and body.

After I first gained some standing as a pro boxer, I was asked to speak on the radio. I was tickled. I would be asked to name my ring idol.

"He's Rene Pelquin," I replied. "He can't do. Nobody knows who he is" I was told.

So I was asked Jack Delaney because like myself he is a French Canadian. But in my heart I still held Rene Pelquin as my choice.

Back in 1926 Rene was boxing in an amateur tournament at Norwich, Ct. After my day's work in the mill I hopped over to Norwich to see the show.

I was with Rene in his dressing room when the man running the show told me he has was one boy short in the 135-pound class.

"Have you ever boxed?" the promoter asked me.

"No," I replied.

"Like to try?"

I hesitated a few seconds, then looked at Rene. I didn't want him to think I was afraid to fight.

"Sure," I finally said.

When I was dressed and ready the promoter as he dashed from the dressing room.

Lou Brouillard of Danielson in this corner," bellowed the announcer, "and K. O. Mullins of Hartford in this corner."

I looked over at the K. O person He looked strong and tough. My knees began to shake a little, while my heart beat very rapidly.

Then the gong sounded Mullins came rushing at me. He wanted to add me to his list of knockout victims

COULDN'T RUN AWAY

I couldn't run away, as Mullins was all over me So I fought back savagely with both hands. I didn't know anything about fighting. I realized, though, unless I hurt Mullins he was going to knock me out.

I was a wild fighter round. In the

A putt on the 18th green by Miss Katherine Field not only gave the Southern District a 5 to 4 win over Northern today at the Winchester Country Club, but also was responsible for Southern winning its first W. G. A. team match championship.

With the teams tied at 4—4, Miss Field came back after dropping the 16th and 17th holes and won the home hole from Miss Elenor Sutton and the match, which carries with it the title.

At Woodland the tail-end Western district team came from behind to beat Central, and Eastern furnished another upset by defeating Midland at Oakley, 5 to 4.

For the third time in as many matches, Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., went down to defeat today, losing to Miss Grace English, 3 and 1. As Mrs. D. M. Belcher won over Mrs. H. R. Watson, 4 and 3, with a medal round of 88, and Mrs. H. H. Hicks took Mrs. L. Q. White 4up camp, 5 and 3, the stage appeared to be all set for a Northern victory.

But Mrs. R. M. Gardiner scored a 2 and 1 victory over Mrs. H. A. Peterson after Mrs. R. K. Byers had won a 6 and 4 match from Mrs. H. F. Tarr, Jr., and the teams were deadlocked three all with six matches in.

Mrs. R. F. Kimball sent Northern to the front again by defeating Mrs. L. H. Dalton. Mrs. F. W. Gifford's victory over Mrs. Kellogg Boynton made the count four all.

Upon Miss Field's shoulders rested the burden and she came through like a champion in winning her match and the W. G. A. title for her team.

Dr. Broderick Adds Manners to Stable

CRICKET OPENS ON SATURDAY

Cricket, the popular English game, will be on the sports program this week-end for Saturday is the opening day of the Massachusetts State Cricket League which has a full quota of games scheduled.

The Mass. league which has been operating in these parts for the past 20 years will have a record entry this season, 14 teams being entered in the race for honors.

West India A. last year's winner, Brockton, Rockland, Bermudia, Standards, Athletics, Windsors, St. George's, Mystic Lodge, Everett, Arlington Mills, West India B, Wanderers and University will comprise the circuit.

Starting Saturday the league will card a full schedule of games each week until August 29, which is the closing date.

STREET PICKS CARDS AND A'S FOR SERIES

New York, May 19 (AP)—Gabby Street has an idea that it's going to be the Athletics and the Cardinals again in the World Series this year, which means that the St. Louis pilot is not unduly worried about the remainder of the National League opposition.

"This is the club right here that we have to beat," he said, waving a hand at the Giants who were stepping snappily through fielding practice before the third game of the series. "If McGraw gets the pitching, they'll be dangerous, but even then I don't think the Giants or anyone else will head us this year."

"We've got nine pitchers, the class of the league. We were good enough to win last year and we're stronger this season in addition to the pitching. What other team in the league has a young outfielder good enough to keep a star like Taylor Douthit out

After a suitable pause for thought, Gabby went on to describe this phenomenal young man.

"Look at him, that Pepper Martin. He's got the shoulders of a blacksmith and legs like hickory. He's a streak in the field and on the bases and he's hitting well over .300. Some day he'll be one of the big stars of the game."

The World's Series idea still stuck in Gabby's mind.

"We should have beaten them last year, but we'll do it certainly this time. Of course, the Athletics will have plenty of opposition beating off Washington. That's a well-balanced club and the double-headers later on in the season aren't going to help Connie Mack's three-man pitching staff any.

"I figure just as I did last fall, and I've been thinking about it all winter—there wasn't a single ball or a single play in that series that I could have second-guessed on, or changed judgment on, in any way. The games Philadelphia got the breaks in they won. The games we got the breaks in we won.

"It'll be like that again, if things go the way I think they will this season.

INDRISANO IS WINNER

RENAULT IS BEATEN BY HALAIKO

By JACK CONWAY

Johnny Indrisano, considered by many keen judges of boxing as the best welterweight in the world, continued his march in the direction of the championship when he outscored Sammy Bruce of Buffalo in 10 rounds at the Argonne A. A.'s opening outdoor boxing show at Braves Field.

Indrisano didn't have any cinch in winning. In the eighth round, Bruce scored with some heavy body punches which shook Indrisano up. Johnny got going again in the latter part of the frame and had his opponent missing at the gong.

Bruce came up to press agent notices. He is an aggressive, two-fisted youth who can punch. He will lick the average run of welterweights without much trouble. In Indrisano, he was opposed by a master boxer and experienced fighter in scoring with his heavy punches.

Indrisano has signed a contract to box exclusively for the Argonne Club until October 1. Matchmaker Eddie Mack stated today he would make an effort to sign Indrisano for meetings with Lou Brouillard and Young Jack Thompson.

Steve Halaiko Defeats Renault With Ease

Steve Halaiko came up to expectations and stopped Baby Jack Renault of Cambridge in seven rounds. A towel tossed from Renault's corner ended the contest when Halaiko was well out in front.

Halaiko had a left hang to conquer Renault. The latter didn't seem to be able to keep out of the way of the wallop. Steve directed his attack to his opponent's mouth and nose.

Jake Zeramby, classy Lynn lightweight who has won five bouts in a row, will probably be Halaiko's next opponent at Braves Field. Mack has opened negotiations for this tussle.

5000 Fans Attend Bouts at Wigwam

Despite the chill, 5000 fans paid $3100 to see the show. With a little warm weather, it looks as if open air boxing would experience a successful season.

The Argonne Club will stage another double windup on next Monday night. Harry Allen of Brockton will appear in one bout against the best available opponent, while Leo Larivee of Waterbury, Ct., will collide with the best available opponent in another ten.

"New Talent" Boxing Show at N. Y. Garden

New York, May 19 (AP)—The first of a series of "new talent" boxing shows will be held in Madison Square Garden tonight. Two fairly well-known heavyweights, Al Watson of North Carolina and Ralph Piccuello of New York meet in the main bout of 10 rounds, but youngsters fill all the other spots on the card.

Al Singer Buys Off Manager for $15,000

New York, May 19 (AP)—Al Singer, former lightweight champion, is going to attempt a comeback under new management. Singer, who lost his title when he was knocked out by Tony Canzoneri, announced he has paid his manager, Hymie Caplin, $15,000 for release from a three-year contract.

Singer's brother will act as his manager in the future, Singer said.

Conway Adds Two More Winners to Long List

Jack Conway added two more to his list of winning selections when Johnny Indrisano defeated Sammy Bruce and Steve Halaiko stopped Baby Jack Renault at Braves Field.

"Indisano is boxing as well as he was when he defeated Joe Dundee and Tommy Freeman," said Jack. "He required all of his ability to dispose of Bruce who is a terrific puncher."

Conway's 1931 record follows:

second round, Mullins slowed down a bit. I guess some of my punches had hurt him. I then started to force the milling. A righthand punch crashed to Mullins' chin and he went down for the count.

A minute later I felt the ring in triumph. I wanted to lay down and go to sleep when I reached the dressing room. I was so exhausted. Somebody then told me to take a short rest as I would soon have to fight again.

I was more sure of myself when I went back into the ring and won my second bout by a knockout in the second round. That ended my night's work.

From that night I have been a boxer. It is an honorable profession and has done a great deal for me.

Chicago Fans Want to See Lew Fonseca

Chicago, May 19 (AP)—After being disappointed yesterday, White Sox fans today were hopeful of seeing how Lew Fonseca looks in one of Charles A. Comiskey's uniforms.

Fonseca, traded by Cleveland to the White Sox for Willie Kamm, failed to appear yesterday, but Kamm reached Cleveland in time to make a pair of hits and field well for the Indians.

DEGLANE WILL TAKE ON ALL CONTENDERS

By RINGSIDE

Henri Deglane, who will defend his title as world's heavyweight wrestling champion against Stanley Stasiak at the Arena on Thursday night, under the direction of Paul Bowser, announced today that in the event he wins he will be prepared to take on Gus Sonnenberg, Ed George, Nick Lutze or any of the other local mat heroes.

"I intend to risk my title as often as the promoters can secure suitable opponents for me," said Deglane. "I shall try to gain as much glory for France on the part of old Georges Carpentier in the ring.

"It was Carpentier who inspired me to become a champion. He saw me wrestle as an amateur and suggested that I come to America. I wrestled around New York for a while and then located in Montreal. It was in Montreal that I won the world's title by defeating Strangler Lewis.

Stasiak is in good condition and feels that with upsets ruling the wrestling world that he has an excellent chance to win the title Thursday night. First Sonnenberg was beaten by George on the Coast in a title match. George in turn lost to Lewis who was beaten by Deglane after holding the championship for less than a month.

B. C. H. C. Rivals in 30-Minute Match

Nick Lutze of Southern California will mingle with Louis Loew of France in a semi-final which will have a 45 minute limit.

Al Morelli of Boston College and Ribier McCoy of Holy Cross will collide in a 30 minute match.

Jim Browning of Missouri will try his famous turn over body scissors on George Vassel, giant Greek, while Len Macaluso, former-ly of Canada, will meet the best available opponent.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

"Golf's Greatest Teacher."

Which is it, precisely, that starts the back swing—the hands and arms, the left side push or the whole body? I am often asked this question and hence I know it frequently is in the mind of golfers. It is not possible to answer the question specifically, unless I say that all these together act simultaneously in starting the backswing. The bothered golfer I know, doesn't want that answer. He wants it to be one or the other and, preferably, exactly which one for him individually. If confusion disturbs your mind on this point it means only that you need to find some definite manner of starting your back swing—and the confusion should easily be clarified. Dispose of the matter by selecting the method which appears best to fit you, then consider that detail of your swing as finished business.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Ten thousand men are employed in the fishing industry of Massachusetts in six different fishing ports, it was disclosed in the 1931 edition of "Fishermen of the North Atlantic," Lloyds' registry of the fishing industry, issued today by the the Fishing Masters' Association of Boston.

Boston, Gloucester, Provincetown, New Bedford, Nantucket and Edgertown are the ports represented in the statistics.

Commercial fisheries from Rockland, Me., to Philadelphia, Pa., on the North Atlantic, are using 1052 vessels.

Boston owns the largest fleet of any group and is followed by New York. Gloucester runs third to these two fishing ports.

The catch registered at Boston in 1930 was 285,212,778 pounds, which totals in value $10,868,671.

SEINERS ARRIVE

Six seiners brought in 153,000 pounds of fresh mackerel from the vicinity of Block Island to the Boston Fish Pier. Prices on the mackerel went lower as a result with the whole quotation being 7 to 8 cents a pound. The Famiglia with 55,000 pounds topped the list. Others in are the Alice and Mildred, Marietta and Mary, Rose Marie, St. Theresa and Capt. Drum.

for Ramon! What was that paper . . .

"Explain that."

The letter was from Tom Edgerton:

". . . unless, Mr. Rarick, this situation is to result in tragedy for all concerned, I beg you to call instant halt to matters between your daughter and my son-in-law. To add to an already outrageous situation, Leslie is with child. I regret the imperative need to bring before you what I am sure must be your first knowledge of this dangerous dilemma, for all concerned. Unless you force it to an immediate solution . . .

A key escaped Jennifer. Pain. Rage. Surprise.

Rarick Questions

"Damn him! Damn!" she cried and began to sob instantly.

"Is seems to me," cried Jenny, frightened, "that Tom Edgerton had better mind his own eggs in his own basket."

"I want to know," shouted Rarick, seeming to gnaw on his words with his long eye-looking teeth, and standing directly up before his daughter as she struggled into the sleeves of her robe, "what there is between you and Berry Rhodes?"

"And what if I don't choose to tell you?" she cried.

"Don't nag her, Rarick."

"Shut up!" he said.

"Either you tell me the exact situation," went on Rarick, brushing the crest off of a wave of small, incredibly sheer pillows, as he began to waggle a finger at her, "or I'll have the Rhodes dog here himself, or go where I can find him."

"If you do," cried Jennifer, wrapping herself in her arms, as if to withdraw from possibility of contact with the threat, "I'll kill myself."

"Jennifer, for God's sake, you must learn to talk quietly to your father."

I Love Him

Her father caught her by the wrist, jerking her to consult him until her teeth gave a click.

"What is this man to you?"

She began to sob; her face naked and dark as she struggled for her hands.

"What you would understand if I told you."

"I have to be to you?"

"Love is to me, Papa," she said. "Help me, Papa. I don't want to love him. I want to hate him and I can't. Help me, Papa. Please, please Papa!"

His heart was in his mouth. "Oh, my child," cried Jenny, dung to the quick, pouring tears. "And Mother never knew. Mother never knew. My baby. What has come over you? This isn't like you!"

"I know it isn't, Mother. It's not me. That's just it. I'm not myself. I want to hate him. And myself. I want to hate him. And want to keep hating him. And I love him, Mother. Isn't that terrible?"

"My dear! My sweet! It is just an infatuation. He isn't worth your little finger. Isn't he, dear—my sweet!"

This bare-backed woman, with the little notches up her spine that were repulsive to him, and the narrow head with the pink hair brushed straight to accentuate it, was wresting the situation from him. She was superb as she drew the head of Jennifer to her narrow breast.

Jenny Superb

Superb with being her mother, while he stood dumb before the emergency of his daughter, even though, at her words, "Help me, Papa," his anger had dissolved into the bitterness of despair. Still, he remained there, dumb, while Jenny, whose pain flowed in the relief of speech, drained from him what had been perilous by near being a moment of contact with his girl.

"You hate me, Mother!"

"That would be helpful, Rarick," said Jenny, regarding him above the head of her daughter with cool, stilled eyes. "One of your typically diplomatic moves."

"I'll break every bone in his body."

"Mother, Mother, make him understand! There's really been nothing between Berry and me. If he goes to Berry, I swear I'll kill myself. I tell you I love him—he—the aggressor. I am the one—"

"Shhh-h, my darling! I understand."

Not Berry

"You see, Mother, it hasn't been Berry."

He was out of it now. It was Jennifer and her mother. Jennifer in the cradle of her mother's arms, life's child.

"Yes, yes, Mother knows—"

Down inside him somewhere, Barry's got sense of honor, I'm the cause. I haven't told him he After that night—even. I've kept wangling him. T.? meet me. To be with me. Every once in a while I think I'm cured, Mother, I've been in hell. I'm sick, Mother.

"You try and make father see that. I'm like a drug fiend. I love him and I don't want to love him. He's snide, he's swine, I keep telling myself. And now that Leslie's going to have a kid, that make me twice swine. O God, I—I think I am crazy, Mother."

Daily True Story

Dolly could hardly wait—sure enough Flash was there—in a newer and shinier car this time. She settled down beside him in the capacious seat and they whirled away. When they had gotten under the leafy lanes of the Hutchinson Parkway, Flash stopped the car and extracted a case from his pocket.

"Take a look," said he, "hold her down there under the dash light."

"Oh," she cried. "Oh."

"Listen," said Flash, "them's the real things—they ain't no manufactured beads—them's eyeal pearls, believe me, Kid."

The eyes of Flash were on Dolly's eyes as she looked at the lustrous gems. She was wondering how much they cost. If they were real, Flash must have paid a fortune for them. Dolly lifted her eyes:

"Are they really royal pearls?"

Picture in Paper Learned About Flash

She closed the lid. "What would I, Dolly Squires, be doing with a string of pearls like that?" she asked, knowing there was a price tag and also knowing that that price tag was.

"Take 'em back, Flash—please."

"Say, kid—what's eatin' you? Them's the real things—you keep 'em like that one thing a clerk 'em away—don't let no one see 'em."

Dolly protested, but Flash insisted. "Maybe I'll need 'em some day," he said. "Suppose you keep 'em for me."

Three nights later Flash Gehney was caught red-handed in a rum battle in which two federal agents were killed. There was short shrift for Flash—speedy trial, swift conviction—18 years behind bars.

Dolly saw his picture in the paper and learned in the succeeding few minutes more about Flash than he had ever told her. She shuddered to think how close she had been to tragedy—how openly she had been playing with fire.

There were the pearls. At least they belonged to Flash—at least she could sell them and give him the money—that would be the square thing to do.

With a good deal of trepidation she took the case to a jeweler's shop. "How much are these worth?" she asked.

So Dolly, in the spirit of fair play, sent the box back to Flash—and wished him good luck. And benefited where the story takes a queer turn.

For Flash tried to sell the pearls, here and there, to learn what Dolly had heard he would, he'd been played for a fool, and by Dolly. And he swore, too, to get even.

But it's a far cry from Atlanta to California—and Dolly Squires isn't worrying.

All names of characters in this story are fictitious.

Vindicated, Then Quits as Fireman

Brockton, May 19—The city council last night accepted the resignation of Herman John C. Hendricken of the fire department, reinstated three weeks ago after his discharge nine months ago for insubordination.

The reinstatement was the result of a court trial in which charges conducted by Handricken. With the court order which restored him to his station, the council passed an order for $1546 back pay, accumulated during the layoff.

Motometer Thief Prefers One Brand

Clinton E. Hodgdon of Arlington has decided that a motometer which he puts in the radiator of his car is the only one worth stealing.

Five times nightly, he parked his car in a parking area in Malden, and each night he found that his motometer had been stolen.

Tiny Tees Wrecked

Vandals destroyed several tees on the miniature golf course on upper Main st., Waltham, yesterday, according to a report made to the police.

Improving Labor's Status

Pope Pius XI. as an Economic Liberal

At this juncture in world affairs, when material progress has been challenged by the confusion of depression, Pope Pius XI. in his forthcoming encyclical identifies himself with the economic liberals.

As an exposition of economic and social tendencies, the message is of interest to non-Catholics as well as the disciples of the Church of Rome.

The underlying plea for the rights of workers as human beings is especially timely, in the face of current insidious propaganda to deflate labor.

Not talking from the criterion of business profits but from the viewpoint of human welfare, the Pope argues for an economic arrangement which will give workers a larger share of the fruits of their labor.

The Hearst newspapers believe that it is not only good sociology to maintain and increase the workers' access to the products of industry, but also that it is good business.

"It is essential that the proletariat be enabled gradually to obtain some of the advantages enjoyed by proprietors.

"In the present order this can be accomplished only by a fair and just wage. Wages, therefore, must be such as really to satisfy the legitimate requirements of an honest working man, not only for his person but also for his family, and to make it possible for him to improve his condition within the limits above described."

Under an improved industrial technique for better balancing output with demand, there may well be an industrial renaissance ahead in which the share of the average worker will far exceed the modest quotas set up by conservative observers, lay or clerical.

Herbert C. Hoover, in his pre-election campaign, indicated that the goal of American business should be the ultimate abolition of poverty in the United States.

The promise of modern industrial technology is extremely generous, and liberal-minded folk should set themselves energetically against the destructive agitation to use transient business troubles as an occasion for tearing down the hard won gains of the laboring classes.

Of course, the basis for high, real wages must be economic, as well as spiritual, and the restoration of full employment at satisfactory wages depends on working out baffling problems of business management.

With business in transition, many voices are being heard.

It is noteworthy that on this delicate subject of wages, the Church of Rome has aligned itself with the liberals, carrying forward the precedent of Pope Leo XIII.

The economic issue leaps over sectarian lines, and is of concern to Protestants, Jews and Mohammedans, as well as to Catholics.

His exposition re-enforces the demand of progressive economists and business executives to leave unimpaired the purchasing power of great multitudes of consumers.

Yes, We Are FOURTH!

Greater Boston's 2,000,000

When Boston slipped a peg or two in the census enumeration, our hopeless pessimists adopted the gloomy mien of professional pallbearers.

Now we can give them something else to think about.

The latest census places Boston FOURTH in importance among the twenty-three major industrial areas of the United States.

Other cities like Detroit, Los Angeles and Baltimore can derive all the satisfaction they desire out of numerical tabulations, but the people of Boston have maintained their high record of industrial productivity, which means wealth, income for the family and education and recreation for the children.

Metropolitan Boston has 2,000,000 people. They can merge themselves into the greater city whenever they wish to take advantage of the prestige of mere size and to effect the economies and abler administration which one GREATER CITY could afford them.

Your New Straw

Until the Ice Cap moves south again, polar fiers cease from flying and old Sol no longer shoots down actinic rays on our skulls, Bostonians will celebrate mid-May by clapping on a straw hat.

"Shall I or shan't I?" you muse, weighing the nifty rush crown.

You succumb. For the first ten minutes it feels rather awkward. Then you respond to it with the pride of ownership. Your ego tells you you cut a distinguished figure, and as you make a one-man parade down the street, you hope you excite burning envy and admiration.

The money spent to procure you such self-approval is not spent in vain. You are for the time being an individual. That two or three other millions also wearing straw hats likewise feel individual really makes no difference. A primitive human instinct to celebrate a new season has been satisfied.

Let's Mind Own Business

Mr. Ochs' New York Times prints the heading: "Soviet China Rift Held Stimson's Aim." As nearly as you can translate that newspaper English, it means that Mr. Stimson, the United States Secretary of State, would like to breed ill feeling between the government of China and the government of Russia. The Russian newspaper, Izvestia, quoted by the Times, should know better.

This country has done some foolish things, but it would never be foolish enough to try to start another war, or foment quarrels between other nations.

Our specialty, hitherto, has been minding our own business nationally. Seeking to cause trouble between other nations, now, would be rather a sudden change.

The sooner our Government learns to concentrate on its own problems, letting Europe, Asia and Africa attend to theirs, the better for every American.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

Along Murray Hill

NEW YORK, May 19—Manhattan in that interlude following the evening homegoing rush becomes distinctly villagey. During summer months especially the gathering of shadows diffuses a charm. Along old Murray Hill there is the drowse of a residential street in a prairie town, the charm of trellised bowers.

Clerks in the all evening shops hang to awning ropes and gossip with passers-by. Stunty roadsters packed with hatless and flannelled youths and their girl friends roar by on way to the beaches. Crossing cops relax their vigil in the traffic desolation.

In the side street boarding houses cliff dwellers perch on stoops and in windows, reading papers and languidly puffing pipes. Freshly scrubbed youngsters rush about at sidewalk games. Tuxedoed head waiters await expectantly in the doorways of cafes.

In Times square musicians swarm to quick lunches for the 6 o'clock snack before setting off to their pits. Taxi drivers slump like spun out worms into grotesque positions along the curbs, gulping tabloid head-lines before the theater rush. The strident roar becomes a hum, like wind in the ash or surf on the shore.

Brightly carmined daughters of the dusk eddy in from cross streets to move slowly before shop windows with quick about glances. Chop houses fill with the well barbered touts, sure thing boys and dice gamblers to await the tip off men for locations of the night's play.

Chorines gather between 6 and 7 for their hasty bites. Throughout the entire Tenderloin there is an absence of the usual restrains. Instead of stiff nods there is hallo-ing. On the sidewalks there are often scufflings like those in front of the barber shop back home.

Twilight seems to humanize the whole island. Lovers are silhouetted on park walls. But when night eventually spreads its blackness it becomes brittle and aloof again. Under the glare of lights the business of living becomes something stern and unsentimental.

In the underworld the "finger man" is the fellow who sizes up a job. "Grease" is protection money. "Caught in a snowstorm" is to be drugged with cocaine. "Promote" is to steal.

Chic Sale has turned down an offer of $25,000 to write another volume with the chalet de necessite as a theme. His first effort was written privately for the edification of close friends. It and another volume followed for public sale and the royalties coupled with endorsement checks have totaled more than a quarter million. But Chic has enough of the idea. He has retired to California to fish. The stage may not see him again.

* * *

They tell of a tea Chic attended recently. Among the hand kissing flutterers was one of those sleek-haired boys with a Byron face and a Captain Kidd heart. He was pointed out to Chic as a notorious gigolo.

"Gigolo!" he cried. "Why, he's got less IT than Mahatma Ghandi."

Two of the theatrical toasts of the season were Helen Gahagan and Katherine Cornell and both are tall and rather Amazonian ladies in contrast to the usual elfin sprites who prove such box office draws. Each is married—Miss Gahagan being a recent bride—yet so extraordinarily radiant are their personalities they attracted those young male romanticists who sit down front night after night mooning. Miss Gahagan, incidentally, is the most graceful lady for her size I ever beheld in the theater or out.

Just Folks

Why Some Jurors Hang Out

Eleven to one they stood. An hour or more
Within the jury room they'd argued o'er
A fellow's guilt. Eleven were agreed
That he, the poor defendant, should be freed,
But one stood out, and still the clock moved on,
And still the jury stood eleven to one.

"One must have courage, conscience to appease.
Who sits in judgment has himself to please,
And who against all argument and plea
Stands firm and fast by us must honored be."
A juror said, "Come, let us vote once more!"
But still the ballot ended as before.

"Give us your reasons," said a juror gray,
"Why stubbornly you vote the self-same way
And hold us here? This is a trivial case,
Surely this simple question we can face
And reach agreement. Why drag on?"
But still the ballot stood eleven to one.

Then spake the stubborn juror: "Now it's noon,
Lunch will be served to jurors very soon.
I'll gladly vote to set the poor man free,
But let us still pretend to disagree.
If here we stay until the dinner call,
The city will buy victuals for us all."

Slowly, Surely

This Crab Crawled Through the Suez Canal, at His Leisure

HE TRAVELED 101 MILES IN 29 YEARS

This crab (scientific name: Neptunus pelagicus) was caught in the Red Sea twenty-nine years ago and marked with a disk to identify it.

It has just arrived at Port Said, at the other end of the Suez Canal, having traveled the length of the canal—101 miles—in twenty-nine years, averaging a speed of twenty-two INCHES an hour.

Professor Gruevil of the Paris Zoological Garden gives you these facts in connection with the studies of sea fish, crustaceans and their movements between the Indian Ocean and the Mediterranean.

Twenty-nine years seems a long time to wait to find out how rapidly a crab can travel through the Suez Canal. But patience in waiting is an important part of scientific achievement.

Darwin, you know, studied the earthworms for thirty years, with greatest care and concentration, to get material for his small work on earthworms.

The average of us are not much given to concentrated science, except in a general way. The interesting thing about this crab and his long, slow journey is demonstration of the fact that everything is COMPARATIVE.

We used to crawl around the earth's surface slowly, walking on our own feet in the ancient days; then riding on buffaloes, oxen, camels, elephants. Now we travel one hundred miles an hour by automobiles or two hundred and fifty miles an hour by airplane, and think ourselves FAST. And we look down on the lowly crab doing his patient, persevering twenty-two inches an hour.

But what we think of the crab, as we glory in our greater speed, is just what light or the electric current would think of us.

We are proud to go 250 miles an hour. Light goes 186,000 miles per SECOND. This slow old earth turns on its axis at the rate of 1000 miles an hour and goes around the sun, 186,000,000 miles, in a year. Divide that by the number of hours in a year and you will find that the speed of the earth makes our fastest flying look slower than a crab traveling.

And in space, near us, there are a thousand million suns, all traveling much faster than this earth.

The moral of all this is: DO THE BEST THAT YOU CAN, CRITICIZING YOURSELF, CRITICIZING NOBODY ELSE, AND GIVING TO EACH CREDIT, BE IT CRAB OR AIRPLANE, IF IT DOES ITS BEST.

What's It All About

TWENTY-THREE. And everything gone stale. Listen—

Dear Elsie Robinson:

Maybe you'll laugh—maybe you'll cry—don't know which and don't care. Here's my story. I had a good home, fine mother, everything I needed. Yet at 12 I began carrying newspapers so I could have my own money to spend. That was my first step toward freedom. Even as a kid I had a great time. The company for which my father worked transferred us from city to city. Gay times — always something doing —amusement, excitement.

Elsie Robinson

At 17, left school for a $50 per week job, against my parents' wishes. Result—a car, wine, women and song—still splendidly. Ran the gauntlet. Burnt? Yes, in a dozen places. Was that a lesson? No—just begging for more.

Took up flying. Even that got stale, after a while. Experimented with electricity and mechanics. Stale—stale! Tried farming to get a grip on myself. Too tame. Nearly died of boredom.

Married again. Separated. Got no breaks—didn't want any. Chasing again. Full speed ahead—give 'er the gun! Woman killer—they can't leave me alone. Yet, woman hater—though I can't leave them alone.

And now—I'm stalled. Tried everything once and it's all stale. Yet I'm starving for thrills. Maybe I'll try auto-racing—wonder if that will go stale, too. WHAT'S IT ALL ABOUT? N. B.

Houston, Texas.

An unusual letter? No—not in thrill chasing 1931. And one answer will go for them all, old or young, "WHAT'S IT ALL ABOUT?" Well, son, up to the present moment it has been ALL ABOUT YOURSELF. And why has everything gone stale? That's why. Because no matter how smart you are, or how daring, AS AN EXCLUSIVE TOPIC OF INTEREST YOU'RE BOUND TO BE A FLOP.

"But I've traveled, seen places, done things—" you protest. "I've had a thousand interests—"

You're wrong. You've never been anywhere outside . . . YOURSELF. You have never experienced anything except . . . YOURSELF. Great things have happened AROUND you, but they have never happened IN you. For you were not concerned with their greatness. You were only concerned with THEIR REACTION ON YOU. You spent your time counting your pulse beats while the whole circus roared by. YOUR EMOTIONS—they've been your whole show. No wonder you've gone stale!

For, after all, how ample and diversified are your emotions? A little love, a little hate, conceit and desire, anger and fear—the same, small fistful of emotions, over and over and over. You're surprised that you have exhausted them in 23 years? Actually, you could have learned all there was to know about them in 23 minutes. Nothing novel or complicated about you or your generation, lad. You're as simple as any fish worm. And, no matter what you do, you harp on the same old repertoire.

YOU MIGHT AS WELL SPEND YOUR LIFE PLAYING WITH YOUR TOES!

Starving for thrills—you say? THEN GO OUT AND GET THEM! Cut out the ga-ga gestures! Stop making faces at your self and listening to your own broadcast! Get out where life is really going on—out where humans are collecting medals for something smarter than guzzling cheap gin and necking cheap women and riding around in kiddie cars. The world is full of adventures—the immortal adventures of the brain and soul . . . life is full of wonders and challenges . . . and they never stale, my son. But it takes a man to tackle them—HAVE YOU THE NERVE?
